Recipients of the Farm and Home Foundation $4,000 scholarships must pursue a degree in agriculture or home economic-related fields. That requirement is easy for these high school students, who have already made strides in their career directions. Erin's Law Increases Sanitation Requirements For Animal Exhibitions

DAVE LEFEVER

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A proposed law recently introduced in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives would require stricter sanitation standards for animal exhibitions in the state.

Introduced by Rep. John Lawless (R-150), Erin's Law was drafted in response to an outbreak of E. coli bacteria that was reported to have caused serious illness in Erin Jacobs, a 3-year old Montgomery County girl. The illness was allegedly associated with contaminated animal manure at a petting zoo in Montgomery County last fall.

According to Lawless spokesman Todd Abele, the outbreak resulted in at least 60 other confirmed or suspected cases.

In the draft language of the law, the term "animal exhibition" includes, but is not limited to, a petting zoo, animal exhibit, open animal forum, and a farm that is open to the public. According to Abele, local fairs and the state farm show would be implicitly included under the law, though some of its terms could be open to interpretation by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA).

Animal exhibit regulations specified in the draft of the law include:

- All animals at an animal exhibition must be under the care of a licensed veterinarian.
- Adequate handwashing facilities must be conveniently located at an animal exhibition.
- Eating areas must be separate from animal areas.
- Owners must post appropriate notices explaining that no food or beverage may be served or consumed in areas occupied by animals.
- Appropriate adult supervision and physical barriers

Milk Marketing Board Hears Testimony From Dairy Industry

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) heard diverse testimony from five dairy industry representatives gathered for a public hearing here Wednesday.

The board gathered information from the representatives to determine a new over-order premium price to be paid to Pennsylvania milk producers beginning July 1.

The over-order premium is the additional milk price paid to Pennsylvania producers above the federally mandated minimum price (federal order). The current over-order premium in Pennsylvania is set at $1.40 per hundredweight and is due to expire on June 30.

An additional fuel adjustment premium of $.25 will continue indefinitely until fuel prices have stabilized, according to PMMB director of Consumer Affairs Tracy Jackson.

Representives of the Pennsylvania State Grange, Dairylea Cooperative, and Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers (PAMD) asked the board to maintain the over-order premium at $1.40 per hundredweight, while the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) and Land-O-Lakes Inc. asked that the premium be reduced to $.80 and $.55, respectively.

Requesting Status Quo

Art Zug, Juniata County dairy farmer and Grange representative, said that the current over-order premium has not flooded the market with milk or

Biosecurity, Coordinated Vaccine Programs Can Control ILT

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — To ward off threats of a potentially deadly disease, poultry producers should look closely at their dead bird disposal or composting operations and keep an eye on the movement of personnel and equipment.

Combating infectious laryngotracheitis, or ILT, on farms requires proper biosecurity and timed vaccination programs, according to Dr. Nathaniel L. Tablante Jr., assistant professor/ extension poultry veterinarian, Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Maryland.

Tablante spoke Monday to about three dozen poultry producers and agri-industry representatives at the Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant in Manheim.

Farm Market Poster In Grower Section

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — As the hillsides and pastures change into deeper hues of green, as the young corn plants begin showing their tender shoots, and as flowers burst into full bloom, produce stands begin cropping up along roadsides across America.

An important source of income for farm families, these markets supply fresh flowers, fruits, and vegetables to passersby.

Bedding plants, asparagus, spinach, sugar peas, and rhubarb are the principle offerings this time of year as stands begin to open for the season.

From large to small scale, from flowers to onions, these stands represent the diversity of roadside stands in Lancaster.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Grain and soybean bids moving back toward year ago levels. Wheat steady to 3 cents lower. Corn mostly steady to 4 cents lower. Sorghum 9 cents higher. Soybeans mostly 1 to 5 cents higher.

Recent hot, dry, windy weather pushed wheat bids higher. However, cooling temperatures and rains in the forecast lowered bids for today.

Wheat quotes are still considerably above a year ago. This reflecting reduced acreage and relatively poor crop conditions. No huge export announcements this week. River barge traffic expected to be back near normal soon. Corn planting virtually completed and producers in most areas fulfilled early intentions. Some low lying flooded bottom grounds yet to be planted and it is getting rather late in the season. Rains in the forecast will perk up the recently emerged seedlings. A decent export announcement on the books today. Corn bids substantially below this time a year ago and should be drawing foreign interest. Soybean producers are busy completing planting. Rains may temporarily halt the drills but it is plenty early yet for seeding soybeans. Big US acreage intended to be planted and good South American crops dropping bids significantly, nearly 15 percent, under a year ago. Now this should really get exporters attention but we are in a global market and prices are down everywhere.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With

NEW MOON, MAY 22

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO...

Spring cleaning took a leap forward in 1901 when Hubert Booth invented the first practical electric vacuum cleaner. Unlike the portable vacuums of today, his was sent out with a crew that went door-to-door, offering to vacuum the dust and dirt out of houses using long tubes. Just imagine—you have your milkman, your fish peddler, and now your vacuum man. In 1907, the Hoover Suction Sweeper Company improved on the design, and in 1921, a Swedish lamp salesman produced further developments and started the Electrolux Company. But what ever happened to that crew of vacuumers?

Progress might have been all right once but it has gone on too long. –Ogden Nash, American poet (1902–1971)

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Sprinkle a little lavender or lemon juice onto your vacuum bags to refresh the air as you clean.

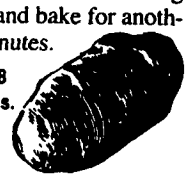
SCALLOPED POTATOES

1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter
5 to 6 medium baking potatoes
2 cups whole milk
salt and pepper, to taste
1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

Preheat oven to 400°F. Butter an 11x7-inch baking pan. Peel and slice potatoes into ¼-inch rounds. Heat milk to a near boil. Layer half the potatoes in the baking pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dot with butter, and add half the cheese, onions, and flour. Then repeat the layering, but set aside the final half-cup of cheese. Pour hot milk over all, cover with foil, and bake for 45 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining cheese, and bake for another 15 minutes.

Makes 8 servings.



The Old Farmer's WEATHER PROVERBS

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 35 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated deductions: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

OPINION

Another Potential Drought?

In the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Update newsletter of March 30 this year, several Penn State College of Ag Sciences water specialists point to the 1999 drought.

One big conclusion: the 1999 drought "caused major agricultural losses throughout the state," they wrote. "Crop losses statewide were estimated at $1.3 billion, while economic loss from decreased milk production was estimated at $1.5 billion."

In that devastating, history-making year, stream flows reached record low levels in nearly every corner. Groundwater levels reached record lows. Mandatory water rationing began in many places. Dry streams and aquatic habitat losses of the magnitude experienced in 1999 caused both immediate and long-term damage to fisheries and aquatic resources.

David E. Hess, acting DEP secretary, noted in the excellent pamphlet, "Water Is Life," handed out at a recent groundwater symposium in Carlisle, that Pennsylvania has spent four of the last six years in drought conditions, causing billions of dollars in agricultural losses.

Yet less than one half of one percent, Hess wrote in the booklet, of the municipalities in Pennsylvania know their "water budget" — how much water they have available and how much they are using. Pennsylvania's State Water Plan has not been updated in 25 years.

Pennsylvania has a Water Rights Act that was adopted in 1939 that only covers a tiny percentage of water users, and lets everyone else fend for themselves, noted Hess.

What of dire predictions that 2001 will be a repeat of the drought year of 1999?

Paul Knight, state climatologist and meteorology instructor at Penn State, spoke at the "Decisions: For the Real Beginning of the 21st Century" Conference in Allentown in January this year.

Knight noted a persistent cycle: 1990 was a wet year, 1991 dry; 1992 wet, 1993 dry; 1994 wet, 1995 dry; wet 1996, dry in 1997; wet in 1998, dry in 1999. Wet in 2000 . . . get the picture?

What will 2001 bring?

To Evaluate Corn Weed Control

Recent dry weather spells potential trouble for weed control in corn. Dry weather affects the performance of both soil-applied and postemergence herbicides.

All soil-applied herbicides require rainfall to activate them for effective weed control. In general, rainfall is needed within 7-10 days after application or before weed emergence.

The amount of rainfall needed for good weed control is determined by the soil conditions, the herbicide, and the type of weed to be controlled. Usually ½ inch of rainfall is considered minimum for effective weed control. The less mobile products such as Prowl, Atrazine, and Scepter, and deeper germinating weeds such as velvetleaf, ragweed, cocklebur, and yellow nutsedge, will require even more rainfall for effective control.

If it has been more than 10 days since you applied your herbicide and weeds are starting to break through, there are several options you should consider. The first one is using a rotary hoe, which is relatively quick and will uproot germinating weeds in the white root stage as well as incorporate the herbicide.

Operate the rotary hoe within the designed speed range of 5-15 mph. Higher speeds increase the surface aggressiveness but reduce penetration. Worn tips greatly reduce performance, so they should be replaced as needed. Rotary hoes are very effective but the crop needs to be planted deeper than the germinating weeds.

A second option is using a postemergence herbicide if your first treatment has failed. While some "reachback" can be expected on small annual weeds when rain arrives, it is risky to count on this for control.

If you decide to use a post-application, there are some factors to consider. First, small annual weeds are easier to control than larger ones. Second, post herbicide performance is also affected by dry weather, so study your adjuvant options recommended under dry conditions.

The third option is to plan on getting out your cultivator or upgrading your cultivation equipment. In recent years, cultivation technology has improved significantly. Everything from rolling cultivators to electronic guidance systems, which keep the tool centered on the row, have greatly increased the efficiency of this ancient task. Joining with another producer to share equipment costs may be a good option if appropriate sharing arrangements can be worked out.

To Recycle Empty Pesticide Containers

This year the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will again be collecting empty pesticide containers for recycling. The program is available to all pesticide users. There are drop-off locations available in most counties and many counties have multiple locations.

In order to drop off containers, applicators must insure that the containers are free of pesticides both inside and outside. The containers must be triple-rinsed or pressure-rinsed.

All label booklets, plastic sleeves, and caps should be removed. Only containers from EPA registered agricultural, structural, turf, forestry, and specialty pest control products, as well as containers from crop oils, surfactants, and fertilizers will be accepted. Only containers made of #2HDPE plastic are acceptable.

After collection, the containers are granulated into chips and recycled as a part of a program sponsored by the Agricultural Container Research Council. A number of end uses for the recycled HDPE are being developed, including fence posts, pallets, speed bumps, marine pilings, and field drain tiles.

For more information and the location of drop-off sites near you, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at (717)-705-5858, your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences Website at http://www.pested.psu.edu/pdaprog.html.

After you have identified the drop-off site nearest you, remember to check with the site to verify the schedule for receiving containers.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHERE IS YOUR 'MACEDONIA'?

Background Scripture:
Acts 16:6-40.
Devotional Reading:
Philippians 1:3-11.

As Acts tells it, there was no grand strategy in the minds of the earliest Christians. The church in Jerusalem did not decide to mount a mission to the rest of Judea, let alone to Asia Minor and Europe.

The Jerusalem church began as witnesses to the resurrection of Jesus Christ gathered together as a community of which Acts tells us, "And day by day, attending the temple together and breaking bread in their homes, they partook of food with glad and generous hearts, praising God and having favor with all the people." (2:46,47).

It took persecution to move the early Christians into mission! On the day of the martyrdom of Stephen, "a great persecution arose against the church in Jerusalem; and they were all scattered throughout the region of Judea and Samaria . . ." (8:1b). One of the Christian communities that was founded by these persecution-scattered brethren was at Antioch, and it was from here that Paul and Barnabas began their missionary efforts that established Christian congregations in parts of Asia Minor.

God's Next Move

Note that it is God, not the disciples, who acts to extend the reach of the gospel. God used the persecution in Jerusalem to scatter Christians throughout Judea, Samaria, and as far as Antioch. He then used Paul, Barnabas, and the Church at Antioch to bring the gospel into Asia Minor. He used the opposition of certain Jews to get Paul and Barnabas started on a mission to the Gentiles. What next would God do?

Next, God would use the hostility of Paul's opponents in Asia Minor and a dream in which Paul would see and hear a Macedonia calling: "Come over to Macednoia and help us" (16:9). Remembering our terminology of several weeks ago, God used Paul's closed doors to open another door through which the gospel could be carried from Asia to Europe.

In this case, it would seem that God was responsible for the "closed doors" in Phyrgia, Galatia, and Mysia. He wanted Paul to be receptive when he experienced this "night vision." (This term and "dream" were used interchangeably in New Testament times and were regarded as channels of God's revelation.)

Luke's 'Philippi'?

Some scholars have contended that Luke was from Philippi in Macedonia.

When they reach Philippi, Luke seems particularly proud of this city which he styles "the leading city of the district of Macedonia." (16:12).

It is interesting that immediately after this vision of the Macedonian call, the writer of Acts slips into the pronoun "we."

"And when he had seen the vision, immediately we sought to go to Macedonia, concluding that God had called us to preach the gospel to them" (16:10). It was at this point in Troas that Luke joined Paul.

The meaning of this passage, however, is much more personal. Each of us has a Macedonian call of some kind to which we need to respond. There is for each of us a place or places in our lives where we need to break out and take a "continental" next step.

You can find Paul's "Macedonia" on the map. But the real question is: Where is the Macedonia to which God is calling you?

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Cheese Market Continues To Tighten

- CME cheese hits $1.60 per pound.
- CME butter remains steady.
- Futures market is mixed.

There are lots of things to talk about this week.

The commodity markets at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange experienced mixed results this week. Cheese prices continued to strengthen. Block cheese prices rose from $1.5850 per pound on Monday, May 7 to $1.6025 by Friday, May 11. Barrel cheese prices rose from $1.5550 per pound on Monday to $1.56 by Friday. Grade AA butter, however, remained close to $1.85 per pound this week, despite a slight rally on Wednesday.

Milk supply continues to be tight for this time of year. USDA reports a heat wave in California and Arizona is taking its toll on the milk supply there. Lack of water is limiting forage production in most of the Northwest. And dry weather in the Northeast, particularly Pennsylvania, is slowing the growth in new crops.

USDA reports that the cheese market is very tight. Cheese supplies are seasonally tight. Traders report concerns about availability of cheese later in the year. Some may be stockpiling available supplies. Also, USDA reports that cheese yields are seasonally declining because of reduced fat and protein levels.

The butter market has moderated some over previous weeks but is still very tight. Production of butter has been limited as processors sell the high-priced cream for other uses. Stocks of bulk and print butter are reported to be down. Retail demand for this time of year is reported "fair at best" by USDA. However, offers of imported butter have reduced butter prices in the U.S. Who wants to buy butter for $2 per pound, freeze it, and then find butter prices in September through November below these levels?

The heifer market is reported to be very tight for this time of year. Springing heifers are fetching $2,000-$2,200 per head in Pennsylvania and as far away as Idaho. I am also hearing reports that heifer calves in the Northeast are really expensive. Many producers are concerned about reduced availability of dairy replacements.

Dairy producers should be receiving their April milk checks soon. They will be pleasantly surprised. The April Class III price is $12.06 per CWT and the Class IV price is $14.41 per CWT. Component prices are $1.9483 for butterfat, $1.5443 for protein, and $0.1081 for other solids.

The futures markets at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange report higher milk prices for the next five months, but weaker prices thereafter. The Class III futures as of May 11 were more than $14 per CWT for the months June through September, but fell thereafter to $12.47 by December. The Class IV futures as of May 11 were strong for most of the year, rising to more than $15 per CWT for the months June through August, but falling thereafter to $13.85 by December. Recall the Class IV futures peaked at $16 per CWT a few weeks ago. The market is convinced that the threat of butter imports now and greater milk supplies later in the year should moderate prices.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

DAIRY ISSUE JUNE 2!

The issue is June 2. Don't miss out!

Deadlines In Place For CAFO Permits

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) recently revised the Chapter 92 National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permitting, monitoring and compliance regulations to include new permit deadlines for Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs). The updated regulations were published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin Nov. 18, 2000. To date, DEP has issued 16 CAFO permits and 32 applications are in the review process.

CAFOs are large animal agriculture operations with more than 1,000 animal equivalent units (AEUs) and Concentrated Animal Operations (CAOs) with more than 300 AEUs (currently, poultry operations that produce dry manure are exempt from CAFO permit requirements). CAOs are operations that fall under the Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act for having more than two AEUs per acre of suitable cropland. An AEU is equal to 1,000 pounds of live animal weight.

All CAFO operations in Pennsylvania are required to obtain NPDES permits, and must apply and operate under either a General or Individual NPDES permit.

The following operations must obtain an Individual NPDES permit:

- Existing operations in special protection watersheds (watersheds that contain high or exceptional quality waters designated by DEP) with more than 1,000 AEUs; and
- CAOs in special protection watersheds with more than 300 AEUs; and
- New or expanding operations with more than 1,000 AEUs; and
- Operations with direct discharges to surface waters.

The following operations, not located in special protection watersheds, qualify for a General NPDES permit:

- Existing operations with more than 1,000 AEUs;
- Existing CAOs with more than 300 AEUs;
- New or expanding CAOs with 301 to 1,000 AEUs.

In addition, operations with new or expanded manure storage facilities and more than 1,000 AEUs must obtain a Pennsylvania Clean Streams Law Water Quality Management Part II permit before operating.

Permit deadlines for CAFO operations are as follows:

- CAFOs operating on or before Nov. 18, 2000, with more than 1,000 AEUs, must apply for NPDES coverage by May 18;
- All other CAFOs operating on or before Nov. 18, 2000 must apply for NPDES coverage by Feb. 28, 2002;
- CAFOs beginning operation after Nov. 18, 2000 must apply for an NPDES permit before beginning operation.

Animal feeding operations not included in the categories listed above may request permit coverage under the CAFO regulations. All farming operations that handle or apply manure must comply with the practices described in the Manure Management for Environmental Protection manual found on DEP's Website (directlink "Nutrient Management"), or obtain approval or a permit from DEP.

In addition, new manure storage facilities need to be designed and inspected by a Pennsylvania-registered engineer who must provide certification that the facilities are designed and constructed in accordance with the Pennsylvania Technical Guide standards.

DEP has been working to satisfy federal requirements for CAFOs under the Federal Clean Water Act and the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System. The Pennsylvania CAFO program is the result of extensive discussion by a work group made up of agricultural interests, environmental interests and government agencies, such as county conservation districts, the Department of Agriculture, the State Conservation Commission, the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The Pennsylvania CAFO program is built upon the preexisting Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act program.

Applications and information for CAFO Individual and General NPDES permits are available from Water Quality Programs in each of DEP's Regional Offices or through the DEP Website (directlink "CAFOs").

2000 Crop Disaster Program Sign-up Continues

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers and producers may continue to sign-up for program benefits under the 2000 Crop Disaster Program.

The previous deadline was May 4. No specific closing date has been determined at this point, said Alarie Fleming, chief of the production adjustment section in the Pennsylvania Farm Service Agency (FSA) State Office in Harrisburg.

Sign-up will continue to remain open until after further program regulations are developed and published particularly with respect to quality loss coverage. Following that, sign-up closure date may be announced, Fleming added.

Although no sign-up deadline has been announced, Fleming stated that producers who experienced eligible crop losses are encouraged to provide acreage, production, and other required information to their local FSA office as timely as possible to finalize applications.

Appropriations Act 2001, included funding for the 2000 Crop Disaster Program (CDP). CDP assistance is available to farmers who suffered crop losses in the year 2000 due to natural disasters. Farmers are eligible for compensation for 2000 crop losses directly attributed to adverse weather and related conditions.

Farmers may obtain further information at their local FSA office located in 50 agricultural counties across Pennsylvania.

New York Grass-Based Livestock Management And Marketing Seminar To Be Conducted June 2-3

WARNERVILLE, N.Y. — Jim and Adele Hayes will conduct a seminar on developing and managing a profitable grass-based livestock enterprise. This full-weekend seminar will be held on Sat. and Sun., June 2-3, at Sap Bush Hollow Farm in Warnerville, N.Y., near Cobleskill, one hour west of Albany.

Jim and Adele Hayes are co-owners of Sap Bush Hollow Farm, a diversified sustainable farm where they have practiced intensive rotational grazing since 1979. Their livestock enterprise consists of approximately 100-125 ewes, a 170 percent pasture lamb crop, 15 feeder steers, an order-based pastured poultry operation, 125 pastured laying hens, 140 pastured turkeys, 70 geese, and 30 pigs. They market their pasture-raised beef, lamb, pork, and poultry from their porch.

The Hayes' have designed the seminar to cover essential livestock farming topics through practical and applied lessons on their farm. Sap Bush Hollow Farm, although successful today, has struggled and still struggles today through many chapters of tough development challenges, with many mistakes and false starts. Jim and Adele openly share their success and failures with good humor and 20-20 hindsight.

Jim Hayes is a recently retired professor of animal science at Syracuse University of New York, Cobleskill. He is an entertaining and thought-provoking speaker at regional grazing, livestock, and poultry conferences.

Adele Hayes has 23 years experience working in rural development for Schoharie County. After she retired six years ago in a determined effort to make the farm profitable, her business and sales ability has changed the color of their enterprise from "in the red" to "in the black." She is a popular conference speaker on poultry production and on her methods of direct marketing.

This is the Hayes' third annual "Greener Pastures" seminar. The seminar is for full and part-time farmers involved with livestock, as well as those starting an operation. People interest in transitioning to grass-based livestock farming or sustainable agriculture are encouraged to enroll. Newcomers to agriculture are always welcome.

Building Profit through Greener Pastures is limited to 20 people, so advance registration is required. Some scholarship assistance is available, and overnight accommodations in private homes is possible. Please contact the sponsor, the Regional Farm and Food Project (RFFP), at (518) 426-9331 or farmfood@capital.net for more information.

The RFFP is an independent, not for profit membership organization of farmers and consumers based in eastern New York state. Formed in 1996, its goal is to create sustainable options for local, family-scale agriculture and to promote connections between farmers and communities.

Holter Honored As Outstanding Dairy Alumnus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — James Holter of Durham, N.H. has been named a 2001 Dairy Science Distinguished Alumnus by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Holter, professor emeritus of animal and nutrition sciences at the University of New Hampshire, was guest of honor at the department of dairy and animal science's 2001 Alumni Weekend Celebration April 20-21 at University Park.

Renowned for research on how to predict dry matter intake in Holstein and Jersey dairy cattle, Holter developed software for dairy ration balancing. Dry matter intake is fundamentally important in nutrition because it establishes the amount of nutrients available to an animal for health and production.

Holter and his research group developed one of only two dry matter prediction equations for use in the field that have been published and tested for accuracy. He is the only researcher to develop dry matter prediction equations that include animal, dietary and environmental factors. In addition, Holter is the only researcher to develop prediction equations for dry matter intake of Jersey cattle. The recently issued 7th edition of the National Research Council's Nutrient Requirements of Dairy Cattle includes much information from Holter's research, particularly from the last decade.

Holter was raised on his family's farm in Clarion County and graduated from Clarion High School in 1952. He graduated from Penn State with honors in dairy science in 1956.

He received his master's degree in nutrition from the University of Maryland in 1959. After earning his doctorate in dairy nutrition from Penn State in 1963, he began his professorial career at the University of New Hampshire.

Holter and his wife, Vada Marie, have two children — Melanie and Jonathan.

N.Y. Farm Bureau Files 'Friend Of The Court' Brief In Farm Housing Case

GLENMONT, N.Y. — In an effort to ensure that the Agricultural Districts Law is interpreted in a fair and just manner and farmers are not subject to unnecessary restrictions that interfere with their agricultural operations, New York Farm Bureau recently filed an amicus curiae brief with the Court of Appeals. The brief was filed to support Paul Hafner, Jr., an Onondaga County crop farmer in his legal dispute with the Town of Lysander.

The controversy centers on the interpretation of a 1997 amendment to the Agriculture Districts Law. The Town of Lysander's zoning laws require all single-story, residential dwellings to have a minimum floor area of 1,100 square feet, a size that is commercially unavailable for mobile homes. Therefore, the town's zoning laws effectively prohibit Mr. Hafner from placing mobile homes on his property for migrant worker housing that is needed to operate his crop farm.

The Agricultural Districts Law prohibits local governments from enacting local laws or regulations that unreasonably restrict farm operations within agricultural districts. However, because of a 1997 amendment to the Agricultural District Law, the Town of Lysander contends that the law does not protect on-farm residential buildings.

"This case is precedent setting," stated Elizabeth Corron Dribusch, general counsel for New York Farm Bureau. "We are happy that the Court of Appeals has decided to hear this case. Preventing farms from using this form of affordable farm housing could have devastating consequences for New York farmers."

Many New York farmers rely heavily on a seasonal workforce. Many seasonal workers travel here for the numerous benefits of working on New York farms, including the free or low-cost housing farmers provide in exchange for this vital service. The farmer must often provide these housing facilities on site, since rental units in rural areas are often not accessible.

In this case, it is the contention of New York Farm Bureau and other supporters, that the town's restrictions on the use of mobile homes for farm labor housing are unreasonably limiting and in violation of the Agricultural Districts Law.

"For a town to arbitrarily oppose one farmer's affordable and acceptable means of providing housing for season workers is unreasonable," added Dribusch. "This farmer's entire season is at risk if he cannot provide this benefit for his workers. Without housing, he will not be able to remain competitive and hire the necessary employees. If the Court of Appeals agrees with the Town of Lysander, farms across the state are in jeopardy."

New York Assembly Passes Bill Creating Council On Sustainable Agriculture

ALBANY, N.Y. — The Assembly recently passed legislation sponsored by Agriculture Committee Chairman Bill Magee that would create and establish a Council on Sustainable Agriculture within the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

"I have said over and over that we must look at agriculture in its totality — what can we do to assist every facet of farming — from lowering costs and increasing efficiency and productivity to marketing products and increasing revenue," Magee said.

This bill would establish a Council on Sustainable Agriculture comprised of the commissioners of three New York State Agencies and 12 appointees to integrate rural/urban issues by providing the farmer and the consumer with information addressing the economic concerns of the farmer and the consumer's concern with a safe, sustainable food supply.

"There is a tremendous partnership to be had between rural and urban New York and this Council is the first step to fully realizing it," Magee commented.

Nutra-Flo
FOLIAR PLANT FOOD

- made from 100% orthophosphate
- chloride-free
- 100% water soluble
- crystal clear, water-white liquid
- low-salt index

Improves Soybean, Corn & Alfalfa Yields

Research shows foliar feeding boosts maturity, quality and yield. Plants get an immediate source of N-P-K when soil nutrients are unavailable. Large applications of nitrogen, high organic matter, high or low pH, dry conditions, excess moisture, extreme heat or cold can reduce macro or micronutrient availability.

CROP	BENEFITS OF FOLIAR PLANT FOOD	YIELD INCREASE
Soybeans	• Improves and increases pod set • Hastens maturity	Up to 12 bu/A
Corn	• Higher test weight • Drier corn at harvest	Up to 9 bu/A

Nutra-Flo foliar plant food can be piggy-backed with most insecticide and herbicide applications. It meets Monsanto's strict compatibility specifications for combining liquid N-P-K with Roundup® Ultra for application on Roundup Ready® soybeans.

Foliar Application Guidelines

CROP	FIRST APPLICATION	SECOND APPLICATION	AMOUNT FOR EACH APPLICATION
Soybeans	4th to 6th leaf trifoliate	60 to 80% pod set	3 to 6 gals/A
Corn	3 to 5 leaf collar	10 to 15 days before tassel	3 to 6 gals/A
Alfalfa	4 to 6 days after each cutting		3 to 6 gals/A

Ridge Administration Encourages Nonprofit Commodity-Promotion Groups To Apply For Promotion Grants

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - State Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes encouraged Pennsylvania's nonprofit commodity-promotion and marketing organizations to apply for the Pennsylvania Agricultural Product Promotion Matching Grant Program.

"Through this marketing effort, public and private funds work together to develop promotional and educational programs to help market our bountiful supply of food and fiber," Hayes said. "Pennsylvania is a leader in agriculture and, to keep our industry strong, we need to promote the use of our many high-quality products."

The grant program provides funds to help nonprofit commodity-promotion agencies to increase consumer awareness of Pennsylvania's agricultural products. The application deadline for the grants is June 30 at the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Market Development.

Hayes also noted that, since the beginning of the matching grant program, the Department of Agriculture has provided more than $3 million to 43 nonprofit-organization promotion projects. Some projects funded by this grant program include a Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program; the "Pennsylvania Produce Simply Delicious" fruit and vegetable promotion; and dairy, apple, and mushroom promotion.

For more information or to receive a grant application for the Pennsylvania Agricultural Product Matching Grant Program, contact the department's Bureau of Market Development at (717) 787-6041, or visit the Department of Agriculture through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

N.Y. Sheep And Goat Telauction Sales A Qualified Success

Robert J. Melchior
Marketing Coordinator Northeast Sheep And Goat Marketing Program
At Cornell University

ITHACA, N.Y. — The Northeast Sheep and Goat Marketing Program had several objectives in mind when the arrangement for the graded Easter Telauctions were made with Empire Livestock Sales. Naturally, acceptable prices for producers were an important factor and to achieve these, we sought to increase volume at the sales and to attract additional buyers through the use of the telephone. Reorganization of the sale system was also necessary to accommodate the potential remote buyers and to speed up the sale process.

Grader Dave Albert confirming a grading decision at N.Y. Sheep and Goat Sale.

Empire Livestock Sales management was entirely supportive of our suggestions. Preparation for the sales included background work to review credit for potential buyers and training of each sale barn's office staff in the use of the computer program that would be necessary for the graded sale.

Finally, in the days leading up to the sale, pens sufficient to hold the expected volume of small animals had to be constructed at the three participating sale barns. This in itself was no small task as these barns are currently organized for handling cattle and calves. Holes had to be plugged and the individual pens organized for a smooth flow of animals from the scale and grading area to the pens.

The sale process itself went well overall. The Chatham sale which was held Friday, April 6, was independent of the other two sales being held on Saturday, April 7. Considerable labor was brought in to handle what turned out to be a smaller than expected sale of roughly 250 sheep and goats. A very adequate pool of buyers appeared at the sale, but no buyers participated on the telephone. Prices received by producers were excellent and the sale process went very smoothly.

Dryden and Gouverneur sales were held on Saturday, April 7. The process was more strained at these locations. Dryden received a greater than expected volume including a large complement of cull sheep. Additionally, a complication between the pen numbering system and the computer program created some headaches for the office staff. Gouverneur also faced some learning curve problems and, as in Dryden, the start of the sale was slightly delayed.

Once again, buyer support at the sale barns proved adequate to obtain competitive prices for producers. No outside buyers participated on the telephone. However, the telephone link between Dryden and Gouverneur was actively utilized and contributed greatly to the Gouverneur price levels. Volume for these sales was approximately 800 at Dryden and 350 for Gouverneur.

The sale process at all three barns moved quickly. The graded portions of the sale took about 30 minutes in Chatham and Gouverneur. In both cases, the auction was run using summary sheets in a location away from the livestock.

The animals were not moved into the sales arena, as is the procedure in most auctions, but remained in their respective pens. Buyers who were present could view the pens before the sale.

All lambs and kids were graded and buyers on the phone relied on the graders' judgment and description to make their offers.

At the Dryden sale, because of the inaccessibility of some pens and the large number of animals, it was decided to conduct the auction at the pens themselves. This procedure worked well with the exception that the large gallery of onlookers were not in a good position to witness the transactions.

General comparisons of prices with other local sales (all ungraded) reveal a slight advantage for the graded sales. Also, comparison with the general price reports issued by New Holland Sales Stables seems to indicate that the graded auctions performed at least as well.

In post sale evaluations, all sale barn managers expressed satisfaction with the process and an intention to continue to offer similar sale procedures in the future. Buyers liked the procedure because it moved the sale along quickly. Other individual suggestions were passed along to the sale barn managers.

The Northeast Sheep and Goat Marketing Program will expand its efforts to identify slaughterhouses in the region which are handling sheep and goats and to post this information on the internet. Although the Easter sales went well, it was apparent that our lists and calls were not sufficient to significantly expand the buyer base. The expanded lists will be available for producers and sale managers to utilize to improve their marketing results. These will be available at the new program Website www.sheepgoatmarketing.org.

ILT outbreaks have been sporadic throughout the Delmarva Peninsula throughout the '90s. But one particular outbreak caused about $200 million in losses in 1994-1995, noted Tablante. Losses were particularly heavy in Sussex County, Delaware, home to about five million broilers in a five-square-mile area.

Delmarva itself, the "birthplace of the commercial broiler industry," Tablante noted, is the fifth largest broiler production area in the U.S., with more than 115 million broilers on the ground at any given time.

Producers should take preemptive actions on their farm to combat ILT.

The problem with ILT is that it is highly infectious. And it can be infectious before the telltale signs are there — gasping for air, conjunctivitis, infectious bronchitis, and bloody radius — so biosecurity is critical.

"We believe (the disease) is spread by people and equipment," Tablante said. Some producers may not be following the rules of biosecurity — "they do not disinfect, do not change clothes. Some allow 8-10 service people on the farm per day. They're not taking necessary precautions."

Tablante said the key to control is "training our growers to take precautions, not to wait for the company to give them instructions."

Top priority, noted Tablante, is to "focus on the people."

Uncoordinated virus programs, lack of good biosecurity, lack of communication to personnel, together with a virus that is endemic to houses can result in outbreaks.

For many counties in the Delmarva, there are only a few competitive integrators remaining. In 1987, six major companies owned flocks in the area. Now, because of mergers and acquisitions, only four integrators are left.

Coordination of ILT control programs between growers and integrators must be conducted correctly.

Though many believe heat can kill the virus that causes ILT, more outbreaks seem to occur in cold weather. In 1998, seven cases of ILT sprang up, including one broiler and six roasters from the same integrator.

The infection causes the trachea to literally clog up. Chickens stop breathing.

Researchers believed that backyard flocks could be the source. One major producer had a backyard chicken flock about 100 yards away. Though ILT was found in the flock, another reason for the infection was blamed.

In many cases, the vaccine source itself, given to a young flock, can create actual disease outbreak in an older flock if the flocks exist too close to each other.

In one case, workers with simple street clothes moving from one house to another created an ILT outbreak.

For other producers, carcass disposal created outbreaks. One producer was composting dead birds right on the ground, complaining of "no room to put them," Tablante noted. Rather than "composting," said Tablante, the birds were "decomposting."

One producer simply had an "incinerator" — which turned out to be a simple aboveground burning pit. Dead chickens were only partially disposed of, and wild animals dragged the carcasses around, potentially spreading the disease.

Wild animal movement can spread the virus to non-vaccinated farms. Also, one producer's house was practically in the shoulder of a major highway in Delaware.

Producers and integrators who don't work together and coordinate a vaccine plan could put flocks at considerable risk. In June 1999, cases of ILT rose sharply simply because "not all the integrators were following the same plan." Only 50 percent of the flocks were vaccinated.

But, with more coordination the next year, the ILT outbreaks were controlled, simply because the integrators worked "in sync," Tablante said.

The importance of carcass disposal, tighter biosecurity measures (wearing clean uniforms, hairnets, and booties), and control of the movement of personnel and equipment work in a big way to control ILT.

If a house is quarantined for ILT, it is important to let the feed providers, the utility companies, and other personnel on the farm know. They must be kept away from spreading the virus.

One producer even went as far as parking a pickup truck in a driveway to keep unauthorized personnel out of a quarantined zone.

"We have learned quite a bit," said Tablante, from the outbreaks. "Good biosecurity measures must be followed at all times."

Tablante said that company managers, veterinarians, growers, lab technicians, and extension agents must work together to manage ILT. The Delmarva Poultry Industry funded a Geographic Information System database to track infected farms and to keep records of their status.

A university project is looking at some correlation between wind direction and infected flocks. However, according to the poultry veterinarian, more data as part of the project is needed before producer recommendations can be made.

Milk Marketing Board Hears Testimony From Dairy Industry

caused difficulty for Pennsylvania farmers to sell their milk.

"The milk supply is low and demand seems to be slightly increasing," Zug said in arguing for the $1.40 premium. "For the first time in years we could tell the Pennsylvania dairy farmer that there is hope."

Zug also pointed out the adverse effect of dry weather on dairy operations this spring, estimating that his first cutting alfalfa crop is "less than half" of the first cutting crop in 2000.

Edward Gallagher, an economist for Dairylea Cooperative — also representing Dairy Farmers of America Northeast Council and Dairy Marketing Services — said that the current over-order premium of $1.40 may be too low relative to prices that may exist elswhere later in the year. That situation could jeopardize the ability of Class I (fluid milk) plants to procure milk, he said.

Gallagher did not ask for an increase in the premium, however, because of "an understandable skepticism about how tight northeastern milk markets will be later this summer and into the fall." Instead, Gallagher asked the board to maintain the $1.40 premium and be prepared to hold an emergency hearing later in the year if market conditions warrant.

Earl Fink of the PAMD also requested continuance of the status quo premium of $1.40 and asked that another hearing be conducted in September or October to consider further adjustments.

The PAMD has a membership of 33 Pennsylvania milk dealers that primarily process and deliver Class I milk. According to Fink, the PAMD distributes "the vast majority of beverage milk sold in the commonwealth."

Fink said that there is a continuing movement of Pennsylvania milk to markets in the southeastern part of the U.S.

"Our major cooperative suppliers have told us that the we may have to pay prices above the $1.65 current premium (including the $.25 fuel adjustment) to attract milk to our plants," Fink said.

Dealers would not recover such "over-price" premiums in the mimimum wholesale prices until the following year, he said.

Requesting Premium Reduction

Joel Rotz, PFB dairy specialist, acknowledged the need for continuing income incentives for Pennsylvania dairy farmers, but recommended a lower $.80 premium out of concern for what the market can bear and for the possibility of cheaper milk being brought into the state from elsewhere.

"It does little good to raise the premium to a point where cheaper milk can be brought in," Rotz said.

Rotz said the price of milk in the grocery store is also a factor to be considered in setting the premium.

"There's something about the $3 (per gallon) limit that consumers notice," he said.

According to Rotz, an $.80 over-order premium translates to $.06 — $.07 more per gallon in the grocery store compared to the federal order price.

Dennis Schad, economist for Land-O-Lakes Inc., said that the availability of cheaper milk from elsewhere in the country will present a danger to Pennsylvania milk producers if the over-order premium remains at $1.40. He called on the board to set the new premium at $.55.

"We believe Pennsylvania dairy farmers are vulnerable to competition from surrounding states," Schad said.

Schad showed the board a milk container from Wisconsin which he said was sold in a Pennsylvania Wal-Mart.

According to Schad, lower milk prices in Texas and New Mexico will ultimately cause a ripple effect of lowered premium prices throughout the country.

All five dairy industry representatives said they supported continuation of the $.25 fuel adjustment premium.

The PMMB will consider the five testimonies and set the new over-order premium by early June, after which there will be a six-day review period.

Earlier in the month, the PMMB reported Pennsylvania average Class I milk prices for April as $17.49 in western areas of the state and $17.98 in central and eastern areas. The prices include the current over-order premium and fuel adjustment premium.

The three-member PMMB consists of chairwoman Beverly Minor, dairy farmer Luke Brubaker, and consumer representative J. Robert Derry.

Erin's Law Increases Sanitation Requirements For Animal Exhibitions

would be required to limit or control contact with animals.

• Owner must promote public awareness of the risk of E. coli infection at the animal exhibition by distributing pamphlets and posting appropriate notices.

Walter Peechatka, executive vice president of PennAg Industries, said that the agricultural community in Pennsylvania has already developed standards for animal exhibition sanitation through the PDA and Penn State University, though the standards are not in the form of law.

Peechatka said that legislation such as Erin's Law could increase compliance with existing standards by five to ten percent, but that fewer farmers would likely be willing risk to exhibiting their livestock and farms to the public. That would result in fewer people who understand agriculture, he said.

"The agricultural community in Pennsylvania is very dedicated to doing the job right," Peechatka said, pointing out that there is already high compliance with sanitary measures.

Steve Wagner, press secretary to Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr., said that the department will form a position on the proposed law as discussion proceeds.

Brendon Landis, agricultural services coordinator for the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce, said he will also be reviewing the law.

USDA Corrects Mandatory Price Reporting Calculations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Because of a technical error in the computer program for the USDA's Mandatory Price Reporting System, the boxed beef cutout and primal cut values reported in the National Daily Boxed Beef Cutout and Boxed Beef Cuts reports for April 3 through May 11 may have been incorrectly calculated.

The Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) is in the process of recalculating the boxed beef cutout values from April 3 through May 11, and primal cut values from April 3 through May 15. AMS will post the recalculated values in a future National Daily Boxed Beef Cutout and Boxed Beef Cuts report.

Corrections of boxed beef cutout values for May 14 through 15 have been issued. The calculations for boxed beef cutout and primal values beginning May 16 are correct.

Boxed beef cutout and primal cut values may be accessed at http://www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/mncs/ls—mpr.htm. For additional information, contact AMS Public Affairs Kathryn Mattingly at (202) 720-8998.

Cabbage Research Development Program Awards $35,400 For 2001

GENEVA, N.Y. — Michael Riner, president of the New York State Cabbage Research and Development Program's advisory board, announced $35,400 in funding for eight cabbage research proposals during the New York State Vegetable Conference in Syracuse in early February.

"The proposed research projects were excellent," he said.

He announced that the R&D assessment would increase to $3 per acre in 2001.

"The Empire State ranks first in total cabbage acreage in the U.S., which includes fresh market and kraut cabbage," said Cornell University vegetable horticulturist Stephen Reiners, who works at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, in Geneva. New York's 2000 cabbage crop was worth more than $80 million.

The Cabbage Research and Development Program Advisory Board met Feb. 8 at the Experiment Station to consider the cabbage research proposals they would fund with the money they raised under the $2.50 per acre research and development fund assessment in 2000. Last year was the first season the assessment was in effect.

Nine research proposals were received, requesting $60,000 in funds. Among them were proposals from Cornell University researchers Helene Dillard, Phil Griffiths, Tony Shelton, Lisa Earle, John Roberts, Steve Reiners, Al Taylor, and others.

Projects funded included research in weed management, controlling alternaria leaf spot, breeding improved varieties, controlling pests such as Diamondback moth and cabbage maggots, the effects of hot water treatments on cabbage seed quality, processing, and storage.

'Cabbage usually ranks near potatoes and onions in value among vegetables in New York," said Reiners. "Since it is important to such a large segment of the industry, cabbage researchers at Cornell need to keep the industry up to date on all aspects of production-pest management, culture, post harvest, etc. The industry usually wants to see research on topics that will benefit them in the short term-things like how they'll control thrips or rot next year, or what they can use to control weeds."

Reiners noted that, in the past, the New York State Cabbage Research Association (the former industry funding group comprised only of kraut growers and processors) had been quite good about funding projects more long-term in nature.

"Perhaps the best example is breeding," said Reiners. "They know that a new and better variety may not be available in a single year but realize that an investment in breeding will pay long term dividends."

Reiners expects cabbage production in New York to maintain current levels. "One encouraging note is that some of our competitors — Texas, Georgia and Florida - have reduced acreage over the past two years," he said. "That coupled with extreme cold this winter in those same areas has led to better prices for our growers who sell storage cabbage throughout the winter."

Cabbage is one of the true stars in terms of nutritional value and anti-cancer compounds, and more and more Americans are consuming it for this reason. Because of its nutritional value, Reiners expects to see greater use of cabbage in prepackaged salad mixes — "a use that would directly benefit the New York industry," he said.

NFU Urges Access To Affordable Credit For Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) recently urged Congress to ensure equitable access to farm credit programs and reemphasized credit as an important risk management tool to help farmers and rural communities during a time of economic instability in agriculture.

Dave Carter, president of the Rocky Mountain Farmers Union, told members of the Senate Agriculture Committee that family farmers depend on access to adequate and reasonably priced credit and that credit must be made available to all producers regardless of race, gender or operating scale.

"Since the farm crisis of the 1980s, both farming and agricultural lending have undergone significant restructuring and consolidation," Carter said.

"Though we do not see the rash of bankruptcies we saw during the previous farm crisis, the underlying problem is much the same as then.

"While access to credit and other risk management programs will not, by themselves, replace the need for sound agriculture policy, it is imperative that family farmers have the same access to credit as large operations and that lending institutions compete in order to achieve fairly priced credit."

The Farmers Union recommendations would assure access to credit in a timely fashion to all producers who meet eligibility requirements and would provide the agriculture secretary broader flexibility to transfer funds between programs and states in order to ensure timely availability of credit.

The policy calls for assessment of the impact on the access, cost and credit terms for smaller producers of the growing consolidation in the farm lending industry.

NFU recommends expansion of the Farm Service Agency loan guarantee program to include loans to finance producer-owned, value-added enterprises that are becoming increasingly important to beginning, socially disadvantaged and smaller producers.

The recommendations also urge the extension of Chapter 12 bankruptcy, at least through June 30, 2002, or until the provisions are made a permanent part of the bankruptcy code.

Moyer Joins American-International Charolais Association

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Taylor Charles Moyer of Whiting, Vt. has recently joined the American-International Charolais Association (AICA), a purebred beef cattle association, according to Mr. J. Neil Orth, executive vice president of the international organization with headquarters in Kansas City, Mo.

The AICA is the official beef cattle registry of the Charolais breed with more than 5,500 active and junior members. The association maintains the pedigree, performance, and carcass information on individual animals for its members.

These computerized records are used to calculate the most accurate and up-to-date EPD to promote the use of Charolais genetics to all profit minded purebred and commercial cattle.

For more information about the Charolais breed, call (816) 464-5977 or visit the AICA Website at www.charolaisusa.com. The AICA is the official breed registry for Charolais and Charbray cattle in the U.S.

Bill Would Allow More States To Join Dairy Compact

WASHINGTON (D.C.) — The U.S. House of Representatives recently introduced legislation that would indefinitely extend the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact past its September 30, 2001 expiration date as well as expand the compact to include states that have already passed compact legislation.

Introduced by U.S. Reps. Asa Hutchinson (R—Ark) and Bob Etheridge (D—NC), the proposed bill, known as The Dairy Consumers and Producers Protection Act of 2001, also seeks to create a dairy compact for southeastern states.

Tracy Jackson, Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) Director of Consumer Affairs, said that the PMMB remains neutral in its position toward the compact because current PMMB price regulations in Pennsylvania are serving the needs of farmers.

"We do in Pennsylvania what the compact is doing in the rest of the region," Jackson said. "Pennsylvania farmers already have the premium (price paid for milk)."

Jackson said that the PMMB will continue to remain open to the possibility of joining the compact if conditions would warrant.

According to a New York Farm Bureau press release, 27 of New York's 31 representatives signed on to sponsor the new legislation.

The states of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont have maintained an official Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact for the past three years.

Proponents of the compact cite regional stabilization of milk prices, local marketing incentives and zero operating costs to state and federal government as benefits of the compact.

The Maryland Dairy Industry Association (MDIA) showed its support for the new bill.

"We need dairy compacts to help reverse the decline of independent farm operations," said MDIA president Myron Wilhide.

Network Wants Ag Ed To Be In Forefront

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Numbers often tell the story.

About 10 years ago, 200 schools in the state had some kind of vocational agricultural program.

Now only 167 of 501 school districts have some type of agricultural education program.

"That's something that really concerns me," said Mike Pechart of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Pechart helps coordinate the Agricultural Education Collaborative Partnership Network. The network includes the Farm Bureau working with a consortium of universities and industry on the re-invention of ag education in Pennsylvania by the year 2020.

Pechart spoke to about 20 agri-industry representatives last week at an Ag Issues Forum at Kreider's Restaurant in Manheim.

Said Pechart, "We're losing these agricultural programs in school that have been helping to prepare our kids."

Those programs, once a tradition in area schools, are becoming lost as successive generations move away from traditional production agriculture.

One teacher asked some children once where popcorn came from. A common response, noted Pechart, was "the microwave."

Though ag remains Pennsylvania's number one industry the past 250 years, in the last 50 years the state has lost 50,000 farms, Pechart noted.

The average age of a Pennsylvania farmer is 53. "That's something that really concerns me," said Pechart, who remembers growing up in Boiling Springs on a family farm.

"I had friends who lived on a farm," he said. "Now I can only point to one that remains on a farm."

About 20 percent of Pennsylvania's working population are related in some way to agriculture, if they're not actively farming. Some are bioengineers, plant pathologists, landscape architects, and others.

There are so many occupations, Pechart noted, that involve food and fiber production and distribution. They include truck drivers who transport farm commodities.

The problem with promoting a program such as the collaborative network is there is a lack of funds, and also a lack of teachers, he said.

Less and less farmers and those related to ag serve on school boards. So ag education doesn't remain a priority in schools. And many teachers, Pechart was surprised to learn recently, believe agriculture is simply "a farmer on a tractor" with a couple of cows.

More and more, Farm Bureau is seeing ag programs that are having their funds cut in schools. But the Network seeks ways to provide lifelong learning, environmental stewardship, long-term ag viability, personal development, professional development, and use emerging technologies.

The focus remains on providing a system to educate students in schools about agriculture and its importance to the state's economy.

"We must not let misconceptions become emotions and create problems for those of us involved in ag," he said.

The network seeks to involve teachers and school administrators in a more enlightened way.

"If we don't, I don't know who is going to," Pechart said.

Horticultural Marketing Video Available

ITHACA, N.Y. — Because farmers face a competitive and volatile market, growing a high-quality product may no longer be enough to guarantee financial success.

An NRAES video shares the experience of managers of eight farms who show how the right combination of products, customers, and marketing strategies can help build financially rewarding businesses.

"Farmers and Their Diversified Horticultural Marketing Strategies: An Educational Video on Innovative Marketing," NRAES-139 ($15 plus shipping and handling/sales tax, 49-minute video, October 1999) profiles vegetable, fruit, and horticultural growers in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, and Vermont who have pursued a variety of rewarding approaches adapted to their unique products and conditions.

The video was produced by Vern Grubinger, director of the Center for Sustainable Agriculture at the University of Vermont and vegetable and berry specialist for University of Vermont Extension.

The growers interviewed for "Farmers and Their Diversified Horticultural Marketing Strategies" successfully sell their products through a broad range of retail and wholesale outlets: roadside stands, farmers markets, large-scale community-supported agriculture organizations, multiple markets, Internet sales, pick-your-own businesses, restaurant sales, and wholesale cooperatives.

In their own words, growers summarize the history of their marketing efforts, explain why their chosen strategies suit their products, geographic conditions, and personal goals, and reflect on how they have developed good relationships with loyal customers. The video will help both new and established growers and their advisors carefully consider the marketing options for their particular situations that can enhance income and promote the sustainability of their farms.

Funding for "Farmers and Their Diversified Horticultural Marketing Strategies" was provided by the Northeast Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program (SARE), a USDA competitive grants program.

"Farmers and Their Diversified Horticultural Marketing Strategies: An Educational Video on Innovative Marketing," NRAES-139, is priced at $15 for one video, plus shipping and handling and sales tax. The shipping and handling charge is $3.75 for a single copy within the continental U.S.

UK Lab Strongly Believes Horse Disease Not Viral

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Speaking to a crowd of horse industry professionals at Keeneland May 10, Dr. Lenn Harrison, director of UK's Disease and Diagnostic Lab said he feels strongly there is no viral component causing recent foal deaths in Kentucky's Bluegrass region.

"Overall findings certainly suggest a bacterial component," he said. "But how to interpret it in the overall picture of what has happened is something that I'm not terribly sure of. We want to look at the interactions with other agents, particularly plant toxicosis."

Harrison's lab has been deeply involved in solving the foal death mystery. From April 28 to May 10, the lab received a total of 386 fetuses and stillborn foals.

Numbers do appear to be tapering off.

Harrison pointed out some distinct lab findings at the Keeneland meeting. Foals have been brought in representing 18 breeds, with 70 percent of the total being Thoroughbreds.

"Examinations of the fetuses is being done by a professional and technical staff, who are specialists in essential disciplines of veterinary diagnostic laboratory medicine," Harrison said.

"Each one of these (fetuses) is getting the benefit of work from pathologists, bacteriologists, serologists, toxicologists, and virologists as a team."

Some of the fetus' lungs are darker than usual, some foals have blood within the eyes which Harrison notes is an unusual condition. Harrison said of the 247 completed necropsies, 127 have shown strains of streptococcus species. Of the 29 aborted foals that would have born in 2002, 22 have shown streptococcus and fetal inflamation.

"Bacteria probably plays an important role in the syndrome we're dealing with, but it might not be the primary or initiating agent," Harrison said. "We feel this is not related to nitrate or nitrites."

Harrison also said copper, iron, selenium and zinc levels in mares appear to be normal so they do not believe there is a component related to those four nutritional substances.

Feed Grain Forecasts Lower For Corn, Barley, Oats; Higher For Sorghum

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. feed grain production in 2001 is projected at 266 million metric tons, compared with 274 million metric tons in 2000, according to the "Feed Outlook" report released May 14 by the USDA's Economic Research Service.

The projection reflects lower harvested acreage for corn, barley, and oats, but higher harvested acreage for sorghum.

Projected yields are up from last year for sorghum and barley, but down for corn and oats.

With decreased production and slightly higher carry-in stocks, feed grain supplies are projected to decrease less than 1 percent in 2001-2002.

Domestic demand will remain strong, but exports are expected to be similar, leaving total disappearance virtually unchanged.

Feed grain stocks are expected to decrease, suggesting stronger prices in 2001-2002. Ending stocks are projected at 53.6 million tons, down from the forecast 55.5 million in 2000-2001.

Feed grain supplies in 2000-2001 were reduced 100,000 metric tons this month, with reduced corn exports increasing ending stocks and lowering total use.

Total feed grain use in 2000/2001 is forecast up less than 1 percent from 1999-2000. Similarly, ending stocks are up from last months estimate and up 14 percent from 1999-2000.

Feed And Residual Use To Decline

Feed and residual use of the four feed grains plus wheat in 2001-2002 is projected down from the estimated 166 million metric tons used in 2000-2001. Corn is expected to comprise 88 percent of the total feed and residual used, the same as in 2000-2001.

Feed and residual use per grain-consuming animal unit (GCAU) is projected to be similar to 2000-2001's 1.86 tons. GCAUs are expected to be down from 2000-2001. In the GCAU components, hog and poultry numbers are up 2 percent each from 2000-2001, but beef numbers are down 10 percent.

Poultry and egg producers are increasing production in 2001 from 2000 levels. Broiler production is expected to be up less than 1 percent from 2000, the smallest increase since 1982.

Producers are expected to reverse this trend in 2002 and increase production 3 percent from 2001. Turkey meat output in 2001 is forecast up 4 percent from 2000. In 2002, production may increase another 2 percent.

Egg production in 2001 is expected to be up 1 percent from a year earlier. In 2002, production is projected to rise 2 percent from 2001.

With reduced calf crops and fewer feeder cattle outside feedlots, cattle placed on feed are expected to decline. Beef production in 2001 is expected to be down 5 percent from the record 27 billion pounds produced in 2000.

With higher prices expected in 2001 and 2002, producers are likely to begin rebuilding herds and reducing numbers available for feeding. In 2002, beef production is projected down 2 percent from 2001.

Pork production in 2001 is expected to begin turning around from the decline in 2000. In 2001, production is forecast up 1 percent from 2000. The projection for 2002 is up nearly 3 percent from 2001.

Corn Production/Ending Stocks

Corn production in 2001-2002 is initially projected at 9,575 million bushels, compared with 9,968 million bushels in 2000, primarily reflecting a decrease in planted acres.

The March Prospective Plantings report indicated producers plan to decrease corn seedings by 4 percent to 76.7 million acres. Harvested acreage is projected at 69.9 million acres, based on the planted-to-harvested relationship during 1997-2000, excluding 1998. (Because of unusually large abandonment due to drought damage in 1998, that year was not included in the comparison.)

The average corn yield for the 2001 crop is projected at 137 bushels per acre, about the same as the 137.1 bushel yield recorded for 2000.

This year's yield projection is somewhat above trend, reflecting earlier-than-average plantings of the crop across much of the Corn Belt, tempered by delayed plantings in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.

The projected effect of early Corn Belt plantings on potential yields makes use of a statistical regression equation that is fit over 1975-2000. The variables in the model include a trend variable, July rainfall and temperatures, and planting progress as of mid-May.

Corn supply for 2001-2002 is projected down almost 1 percent from 2000-2001. The only changes made in the 2000-2001 estimates this month was a 50-million-bushel decrease in exports, a 3-million-bushel decrease in imports and a corresponding increase in ending stocks. The increase in 2000-2001 ending stocks plus decreased production, caused global 2001-2002 supplies to be about 1 percent below a year earlier.

Domestic use of corn in 2001/2002 is projected down nearly 1 percent from 2000-2001's record high.

Feed and residual use of corn is expected to be down 125 million bushels from a year earlier because of reduced feed demand. Food, seed, and industrial (FSI) use is projected up about 4 percent from 2000-2001. Exports are little changed from the 1,900 million bushels forecast for 2000-2001. Ending stocks are expected to decrease 4 percent from a year earlier.

Food, Seed, Industrial Use Of Corn To Continue Growing

Food, seed, and industrial (FSI) use of corn in 2001-2002 is expected to increase nearly 4 percent from a year earlier and equal to 18 percent of total supplies, up from 17 percent in the last 2 years.

High fructose corn syrup use of corn is projected to increase almost 1 percent from the 550 million bushels expected to be used in 2000-2001. This is a slower growth rate than in many prior years, but per-capita sugar use is already a record high.

Glucose and dextrose use in 2000-2001 is expected to be down from the previous year, but is expected to increase again in 2001-2002. Starch use of corn in the first half of 2000-2001 was down from the year earlier but for all of 2000-2001, starch use is expected to rebound and be up nearly 2 percent from 1999-2000. Corn used to produce starch may increase 2 percent from the expected use in 2000-2001.

Ethanol Production

Monthly ethanol production reported by the Department of Energy was record high at 116,000 barrels in February 2001. In addition, alcohol production in the first half of 2000-2001 was record high at 843 million gallons compared with 788 million in 1999-2000.

This ethanol production reflects higher use of capacity and the new plants that have been added in the last year to take advantage of various state-level ethanol production incentives.

In addition, 42 companies have signed up to increase ethanol output by 246 million gallons in response to the Bioenergy Program, which provides incentives for increased production. Corn used to produce ethanol in 2000-2001 is expected to be up 9 percent from 1999-202000's 566 million bushels.

There have been many proposed laws that could directly or indirectly affect ethanol production. Many localities would prefer ethanol-blended gasoline to reduce the risk of MTBE in groundwater supplies. As a result, based on current laws and regulations, corn use for ethanol in 2001-2002 is projected to increase 8 percent.

Corn Price To Remain Weak

Prices received by farmers to date and assuming normal marketings suggest prices will average between $1.80 per bushel and $1.90 per bushel in 2000-2001, about the same as the $1.82 per bushel received in 1999-2000.

With ending corn stocks down only slightly from a year earlier, average prices received by farmers are projected between $1.65 and $2.05 per bushel.

Sorghum Supply, Use

During the first 2 weeks of March, farmers said they intended to plant 9.4 million acres to sorghum in 2001, up 2 percent from last year and 1 percent above 1999.

Using the historical relationship between harvested and planted acres during 1997-2000, excluding 1998, gives an estimated harvested acreage of 8.3 million acres. If realized, this estimated harvested acreage would be up 0.6 million acres from 2000.

Yields for 2001 were estimated from a simple linear trend fit over the 1960-2000 period and are expected to be up almost 14 percent from last year's drought-reduced level.

Sorghum production in 2001 is projected to increase 22 percent from 2000's 470 million bushels. Total supply is projected up 18 percent from 2000-2001 because of increased production.

Sorghum use in 2001-2002 is projected up 20 percent from the expected 480 million bushels used in 2000-2001. Food, seed, and industrial use is expected to be 25 million bushels higher than the 35 million used in 2000-2001, with most of the use accounted for by ethanol plants close to sorghum-producing areas.

Some ethanol plants that use sorghum signed up for the Bioenergy Program and are expected to increase sorghum use. Feed and residual use is also likely to be up because of larger supplies.

Exports in 2001-2002 are projected to be up 7 percent from the 215 million bushels expected in 2000-2001. Exports to Mexico are likely to be stronger in 2001-2002 than in the current marketing year. Ending stocks are expected to be unchanged from 2000-2001's 55 million bushels.

Prices received by farmers for sorghum in 2001-2002 are expected to average $1.50-$1.90 per bushel, compared with $1.75-$1.85 in 2000-2001. These sorghum prices would be 91-93 percent of the expected corn prices in 2001-2002, down from 97 percent of 2000-2001 average corn prices. In 1999-2000, sorghum weighted average prices received by farmers were 86 percent of corn prices.

Barley Supply, Use

Farmers reported intentions to plant 5.3 million acres of barley in 2001, down 9 percent from 2000. Area harvested is estimated by using the relationship between planted and harvested acres in 1998-2000. Projected yields are derived from a simple linear trend fit over the 1960-2000 period. In 2001-2002, trend yields are 61.8 bushels per acre, up 1 percent from 2000.

The total barley supply in 2001-2002 is projected at 432 million bushels, down 5 percent from 2000-2001. Beginning stocks are expected to be down 8 percent from the 111 million bushels in 2000-2001. Production is projected down 7 percent from 2000-2001's 318 million bushels. Imports in 2000-2001 are expected to be up 7 million bushels from the current estimate of 28 million bushels in 2000-2001 because of reduced U.S. supplies and a larger Canadian crop.

In 2001-2002, barley use is projected at 327 million bushels, down 8 percent from 2000-2001. Among the use categories, only exports are expected to be down. FSI and feed and residual use are projected to be unchanged from last year.

Average prices received by farmers in 2001-2002 are projected at $1.95-$2.35 per bushel, compared with the $2.15 expected in 2000-2001. Forecast average prices for barley in 2000-2001 are stronger than the weighted average of $2.13 for 1999-2000, because of stronger feed barley prices.

Lowest Planted, Harvested Oats Acreage On Record

Acres seeded and to be seeded by U.S. farmers for the 2001 oats crop year are expected to total 4.4 million acres, down 52,000 acres from 2000. This would be the lowest planted acreage since 1866, breaking the previous record low of 4.5 million acres planted in 2000.

Growers expect to harvest 2.2 million acres for grain, down 124,000 acres from 2000. This would also be the lowest harvested acreage on record. Projected yields were derived from a simple linear trend fit over the 1960-2000 period and are down 3.6 bushels per acre from the 64.2 bushels per acre realized in 2000.

The total oats supply in 2001-2002 is projected down 5 percent from 2000-2001's 335 million bushels. The decline stems from reduced production and imports because beginning stocks are up 6 percent.

Total oats use for 2001-2002 is projected down 8 percent from last year because of reduced supplies. All of the individual categories except feed and residual are also unchanged from a year earlier.

Oats prices received by farmers in 2001-2002 are expected to average $0.90-$1.30 per bushel. In 2000-2001, average oats prices are forecast at $1.10 per bushel, down slightly from $1.12 per bushel in 1999-2000.

Hay Disappearance Increased

Hay stocks on May 1, 2001, totaled 21 million tons, down 27 percent from 2000. In the 2000-2001 May-April hay year, total disappearance (beginning stocks plus production less ending stocks) was 146 million tons, up 4 percent from the previous year.

Disappearance per roughage consuming animal unit was up 4 percent from the 2.12 tons consumed in 1999-2000.

Farmers in March indicated they planned to harvest 63.8 million acres of hay in 2001, up 7 percent from the 59.9 million acres harvested in 2000.

Given estimated livestock numbers, current pasture and range conditions, and hay stocks, prices are expected to remain relatively strong in the 2001-2002 hay marketing year.

The simple average of all hay prices from May 2000 to April 2001 was $85.49 per ton, compared with $77.02 during the same period a year earlier.

Beef Producers To Join Forces At Summer Conference

DENVER, Colo. — Serious meetings outlining the future of the beef industry will combine with social get-togethers as the cattle industry holds its Summer Conference in Denver Aug. 5-9.

The conference is sponsored by the Cattlemen's Beef Board, National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), American National CattleWomen, Inc. (ANCW) and Cattle-Fax.

Called "Define the Industry: Be Part of the Adventure," the program will feature demand-building ideas for increasing the beef industry's energy, as well as policy-oriented sessions to increase the business viability of the cattle industry.

Each of the organizations will hold separate meetings addressing specific objectives, while joint sessions will be held when common goals are shared.

A Cattlemen's College: Consumer Demand Strategies session will be held again this year, sponsored through an education grant from Pfizer Animal Health.

Individuals attending the college will gain insight to those issues that influence a consumer's willingness to purchase beef.

Highlighting social activities will be the Aug. 7 appearance of Don Edwards, a well-known cowboy balladeer whose classic hits include "The Habit," "Going Back to Texas" and "Coyote."

ANCW meetings will be held on Aug. 5, 6 and 7, while NCBA will hold its regional caucus meetings and council meetings on Aug. 7. Beef Board meetings will be held Aug. 6, 7 and 8.

Joint committee meetings will be held Aug 7 and 8. The Cattle-Fax board of directors meeting will be held on Aug. 7, while Beef Board and NCBA board meetings will be held on Aug. 9.

USDA Sustainable Agriculture Research Focuses On Alternatives To Agri-Chemicals On Apples

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Research into apple production funded by USDA's Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program shows that growers who adopt new orchard management practices can control tough apple pests with fewer agri-chemicals.

A team of SARE-funded University of Massachusetts researchers are developing ecologically sound orchard management practices to control plum curculio, European red mites, apple maggot and flyspeck disease. Along with apple scab, these pests account for more than 90 percent of pesticide use on apples in the northeast. In commercial orchards, scientists and farmers are collaborating to evaluate a combination of practices and biological controls. For example, careful pruning can reduce the risk of flyspeck infection. Releasing predatory mites that prey on European red mites provides near-perfect control. And red spheres coated with an odor bait and sticky capturing substance controlled apple maggots without any need to spray. Contact Dr. Ron Prokopy, (413) 545-1057.

Research into alternatives to synthetic fungicides in apple production has shown real promise. SARE-sponsored research at the University of Wisconsin-Madison indicates that an inexpensive spray mix of amino acids and vitamins, or even a solution of potassium bicarbonate, can effectively reduce certain apple diseases such as sooty blotch and flyspeck under local conditions. Left untreated, the fungi responsible for those diseases cause unsightly blemishes on the apple surface, reducing or eliminating the fruit's market value.

When applied instead of conventional synthetic fungicides, those sprays provided levels of disease control comparable to the fungicide sulfur. Use of such environmentally benign compounds reduces the risk that potentially harmful chemicals will enter ground water, nearby streams, or the food chain. Contact Dr. John Andrews or Dr. Patty McManus, (608) 263-9642.

Building on the natural resistance certain apple varieties exhibit to some of the most plaguing pests and diseases, a team of SARE-funded researchers from Pennsylvania's Rodale Institute, Cornell University, Rutgers University and the University of Massachusetts studied more than 30 types of apple trees over eight years.

They found that growers can reduce fungicide use by 50 to 100 percent using scab-resistant cultivars, or types, they developed. They also found that encouraging the presence of beneficial insects or bacteria that prey on unwanted pests and scouting for pest insects before spraying can save growers up to $200 per acre in pesticide costs. Contact Lorraine Berkett, (802) 656-0972.

Northeast DBQA Program Unveiled

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council Board of Directors received a preview of the new Northeast Regional Dairy Beef Quality Assurance (DBQA) trailer exhibit and educational materials during their board meeting here on Wednesday, April 25.

The three piece exhibit, producer booklet and accompanying videos are available for educational meetings and for display at producer group functions, trade shows, sale barns, cooperative extension events, or any place producers meet.

"The current climate of concern about food safety and animal health issues here and abroad makes this DBQA education program timely and informative," said Paul Slayton, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council. "It also demonstrates the beef and dairy industries' commitment to consumers."

The Northeast Regional Center for Dairy Beef Quality Assurance is dedicated to raising producer awareness of the monitoring, management and marketing practices, which impact food safety, consumer confidence, beef quality and dairy profitability.

In developing the display elements and materials, the Center used data from the 1999 National Market Cow and Bull Quality Audit. The purpose of the Audit, conducted by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, is to improve the consistency and competitiveness of market cow and bull beef and increase the value of market cows and bulls.

The Audit process included interviews with packers, processors, retailers, consumers and producer affiliated organizations.

The center also gleaned timely information about related dairy herd management areas such as bio-security, health maintenance, goal-setting and record-keeping, profitable culling, cow comfort, and the safe and proper administration of animal health products to present a comprehensive education package for dairy producers.

The most important message of the program is that dairy animals are also beef animals and that dairy producers are significant contributors of valued beef products.

Dairy ground beef, mixed with fed beef trimmings, represents 43 percent of all beef consumed in this country. And today, about half of the beef from dairy cull cows is processed and merchandised as higher-value, whole-muscle cuts for food favorites like fajitas, philly steaks, deli and fast-food roast beef, and tenderized steaks for economy steak houses.

Quality defects such as poor condition, bruising, abscesses, inflammation and condemnation have a negative effect on the price that beef processors can pay for dairy cows. The 1999 Audit demonstrated much progress since the 1994 Audit; however, more progress is needed.

This Dairy Beef Quality Assurance program provides dairy producers with tools to improve in key areas, which also have a significant favorable impact on the profitability of their farms.

For more information about the DBQA exhibit and materials, or to schedule a DBQA educational program or exhibit display, contact the Northeast Regional Center for Dairy Beef Quality Assurance at 717-939-7000.

Producers can also contact the Center for materials or information about scheduled programs. The Center is located at the Pennsylvania Beef Council office at 1500 Fulling Mill Road, Middletown, PA 17057.

Six $4,000 Scholarships Awarded To Ag, Home Ec Students

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — College tuition will be eased for six students who each received a $4,000 Farm and Home Foundation scholarship Tuesday evening here at the Farm and Home Center.

The Foundation annually selects several qualified county high school seniors pursuing studies in agriculture or home economics fields.

Most of the scholarship recipients have already amassed an astounding amount of knowledge in their chosen fields of study. Although only 18 years old, Kevin Pfautz, through genetic breeding, has established a business with his brother in which they sell 68 head of show stock annually in addition to showing quite a few of his own grand champions.

Kevin placed first in individual nationwide swine judging after his team (Lancaster County 4-H Livestock Judging Team) won at local, regional, and state 4-H competitions.

So it is not surprising that Kevin wants to pursue a degree in animal science.

"I'm most interested in genetics and pharmaceutical fields," Kevin said of his career goal. He will study at Penn State's main campus.

Kevin is the son of Rich and Sue Pfautz, Lititz, and is a student at Warwick High School, where he was a member of the football team.

Stephanie Feister has her sights set on becoming an ag teacher, after being impacted by the teaching skills of her ag teacher at Manheim Central High School.

Stephanie found FFA so enjoyable and educational that she wants to influence others about the importance of agriculture. She is the Lancaster County FFA president and has held several other leadership positions in her chapter and in the county. She is contemplating running for a state FFA office.

Stephanie lives on a horse farm and helps her parents, Mike and Diane Feister, with their many horses.

Stephanie, the Manheim Community Farm Show queen, will study agriculture sciences and education at Penn State Berks Campus.

Amanda Lloyd's roots also play a role in her pursuit of landscape horticulture.

"I grew up on a small farm and always liked growing things," the 17-year-old said. The daughter of Rus and Esther Lloyd, Quarryville, will attend the University of Delaware.

At Solanco High School, Amanda is active in concert, marching band, color guard, field hockey, and soccer. She also is active in community youth soccer and her church youth group.

Amy Myers wanted to be a teacher since she was in fourth grade. Knowing that she wants to return to the county and that elementary school teaching jobs are scarce, she considered her options. She realized she really enjoyed classes in family and consumer sciences. So she's off to Immaculata College, Paoli, to pursue a degree in home economics education.

"In that field, I can combine both teaching and children," Amy said of her career choice.

At Manheim Central High School, Amy is a member of National Honor Society, section editor of the yearbook, and member of field hockey and prom and baccalaureate committees.

Amy is actively involved at Ruhl's United Methodist Church and works part-time at a hardware store. Amy is the daughter of Ron and Linda Myers, Manheim.

Emily Buehrle, New Holland, plans to study interior design at Moore College of Art and Design. Emily is the daughter of Nancy Buehrle and a senior at Garden Spot High School.

Kristy Rhinier also plans to study interior design, but at Pennsylvania School of Art and Design. The 18-year-old is the daughter of Susan Rhinier, Lancaster, and a senior at McCaskey High School.

Maryland-Virginia 2000 Member Returns Top $30 Million

RESTON, Va. — In its first full year of operation after consolidating with Carolina Virginia Milk Producers and becoming a partner with Valley Milk Products LLC, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers returned more than $30 million in profits and over-order premiums to members.

Profits increased $1.2 million to nearly $6 million, a 24 percent increase that means about 18.5 cents per hundredweight for its nearly 1,600 members. Over-order premiums increased $10.7 million to more than $24 million, a 76 percent increase.

Over-order premiums include Maryland & Virginia's 23-year 13th check for its Federal Order 1 producers. Totaling more than $3.7 million, or 24 cents per hundredweight, the distribution is 9 cents higher than last year and 5 cents higher than average.

Federal Order 1 members received additional over-order premiums totaling 33 cents per hundredweight, up from 1999's 15 cents. Members marketing their milk to Federal Orders 5 and 7 received average over-order premiums of 88 cents per hundredweight, up from 1999's 59 cents. These premiums were generated through pricing organizations including Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Association, Dairy Cooperative Marketing Association, and the new Northeast Milk Marketing Agency.

Total sales increased $87 million to $713 million. Equity was distributed to current and former members nearing $4 million. Return on equity was 20.5 percent, up from 1999's 17.8 percent.

According to Mike Asbury, Maryland and Virginia's chief financial officer, "Increased revenues (as a result of our consolidation with Carolina Virginia and joint venture with Valley Milk) coupled with better net returns from market premiums are the major factors in generating this year's profits and premiums."

General Manager Robert Shore said, "We're pleased that change for Maryland and Virginia has meant increased efficiencies and increased returns for our members. That's our mission and one that we are constantly focused on."

FARM BILL OPINIONS COUNT

About 3,500 Pennsylvania growers are being asked for their opinions about the 2002 Farm Bill. This study has historically been conducted in midwestern states for the last few Farm Bills.

Penn State and other land grant universities in the Northeast want to offer Congress another perspective for the next Farm Bill. The survey is a cooperative effort between Penn State and the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service.

Opinions are only being asked on two mailed surveys sent in early and mid-May. We will not be calling on the telephone. If you receive a survey, please send it back in so we get a good mail response to properly represent the views of Pennsylvania and northeastern operators.

Floriculture Survey Results

A big "thank you" is due to the Pennsylvania producers who helped in this annual effort. The 2000 survey measured many more specific crops than in earlier years. The report can be used by growers to evaluate crops raised and average prices in Pennsylvania and surrounding states.

Pennsylvania is the seventh largest floriculture state with $136.5 million in sales in 2000. This only measures one part of the greenhouse and nursery industry, which is the third largest sector of Pennsylvania agriculture, after milk and cattle.

Later this summer, a new nursery production report will be published to complete the horticultural picture.

Crop Acreage, Livestock Measured

In general, we have seen cool and wet conditions in early spring but dry conditions have been the topic of recent discussions. The weather always impacts agriculture, so we are asking for your help to measure field crop plantings for this year as part of the annual June Agricultural Survey under way from late May through mid-June. The survey also measures grain stocks, livestock, farm numbers, and land values. The quarterly hog survey is conducted at the same time and coordinated to reduce additional contacts for hog farmers.

The survey includes different phases to keeps costs low and quality high.

Our interviewers will visit 140 areas around the state that are about one square mile each. They will contact all operators to draw operation boundaries on aerial photographs and account for all land use within the selected area. In addition, we've sampled about 1,400 crop farmers and 225 hog growers that will get letters to explain the surveys. They will be contacted during the survey period to answer acreage and livestock questions that don't require using the more complex aerial photos.

These USDA surveys are done at the same time nationwide. So it is important that Pennsylvania producers be properly represented among the other states.

Crop statistics provide producers with vital information for cash crop farmers and current and potential feed supplies for milk and livestock producers. Hog growers can review national trends to help with production decisions.

As with all our surveys, by federal law, your name and address and data about your operation are completely confidential. The same law also protects your data from requests under the Freedom of Information Act. By law, no one can gain early access to the results of any survey.

The reports are available to everyone at the PASS Website at www.nass.usda.gov/pa/. Use the Search button to find "Acreage" report, June 29 (8:30 a.m.); "Crop Production," July 11 (8:30 a.m.) with potatoes; "Grain Stocks," June 29 (8:30 a.m.); "Quarterly Hogs And Pigs," June 29 (3 p.m.).; or "Farms and Land In Farms," 2/23/01 and 2/12/02.

If you are contacted personally or by telephone, please remember that your response is important so that we can publish the most accurate statistics possible. After all, agriculture counts!

Honeybees Increase Strawberry Yields

Tim Elkner
Lancaster County
Horticulture Agent

A recent column in a horticultural publication reported on research which proved that honeybees present in strawberry fields during flowering resulted in more and larger berries.

Many growers have believed that this was the case, but there had been little research information to document the benefits of bees.

However, Dr. Joseph Kovach conducted a study at Cornell University that found honeybee-pollinated fields yielded 20 percent more strawberries (by weight) than nonpollinated fields.

This funding is significant for several reasons. First, the only cost involved to increase yields was the expense of hive rental. There were no additional fertilizers or pesticides necessary.

Second, the resulting berries were larger and sweeter. This would definitely help sales of your fruit.

And third, the number of misshapen berries in the field was reduced. This was a result of more efficient pollination by the bees.

Strawberries are wind-, and gravity-pollinated and bees or other pollinators are not necessary to set a crop. However, by having bees present to move pollen between flowers, more achenes (or seeds) are formed. Developing seeds release hormones that cause development of the flesh nearby, resulting in larger and better-shaped berries. Developing seeds also stimulate the accumulation of sugars in the fruit so the more seeds there are, the sweeter the berry.

Honeybees find strawberry flowers attractive so large numbers of colonies are not necessary to improve pollination. One strong hive for every two acres of berries should be sufficient to increase your yields.

I encourage you to look into having honeybees present during flowering of your strawberry fields this year. This small investment could yield large returns at harvest.

USDA Launches Online Manual Of Permitted Fruits, Vegetables

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA is establishing a new manual on its Website that lists all of the fruits and vegetables from every country in the world that may be imported into the U.S.

The manual, which includes fresh herbs and sprouts, can also be used to determine what permits are required for importation. Anything that is not included on the list is prohibited from entering the U.S.

This manual will meet the needs of importers from around the world who want to expand their markets to the U.S. but are unsure of what fruits and vegetables are permitted.

The database will also benefit USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, which has agricultural inspectors at international ports of entry around the country. APHIS' inspectors can use the online manual, which contains pictorial identification guides, to more quickly determine if cargo and other produce brought to the U.S. by importers and passengers is allowed entry or must be confiscated.

While the manual has been available in hard copy, this is the first time it has been made accessible online.

All of the fruits and vegetables included in the manual are intended for human consumption, not for propagation. Fruits and vegetables not included on the list are prohibited because of the pest and disease risk associated with the produce or because a risk assessment has not been done to determine if the commodity can be safely imported.

To view the complete list, visit www.aphis.usda.gov/ppq/manuals. The manual will be regularly updated to reflect changes and additions to the list.

USDA Amends Beef Promotion, Research Rules And Regulations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is amending the Beef Promotion and Research Rules and Regulations under the Beef Promotion and Research Act of 1985 (Act) to clarify requirements for documenting cattle sales transactions for which no assessments are due.

The amendment will specifically require the timely filing of Statement of Certification of Non-Producer Status forms to obtain exemption from assessments.

Under the Act, a $1-per-head assessment is due each time cattle are sold by a producer.

However, when cattle are sold within 10 days of purchase by a person who certifies that he or she acquired ownership of the cattle to facilitate the transfer of ownership to a third-party, a completed Statement of Certification of Non-Producer Status form may be provided to the collecting person in lieu of the $1 assessment.

The amendment to the Rules and Regulations specifies that the Statement of Certification of Non-Producer Status form must be provided "at the time the collecting person makes payment to the seller of cattle."

This amendment is designed to improve enforcement of assessment collection.

The changes will appear in today's Federal Register. Copies of the final rule and additional information are available from Ralph L. Tapp, Chief, Marketing Programs Branch, AMS Livestock and Seed Program, USDA Stop 0251, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Washington, D.C. 20090-0251; telephone number (202) 720-1115; fax (202) 720-1125; or e-mail ralph.tapp@usda.gov.

Veneman Names Members To National Fluid Milk Processor Promotion Board

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Ann M. Veneman has announced the appointment of two incumbents and five new members to the National Fluid Milk Processor Promotion Board.

All will be seated at the next board meeting, July 13. Reappointed members were Ann Puelz Ocana, Phoenix, Ariz. (at-large); and Joseph W. Van Treeck, Anchorage, Alaska (at-large public member).

Newly appointed were Peter Ross, Franklin, Mass., (Region 1); Mary Williams, Athens, Tenn., (Region 4); Rachel Kyllo, Minneapolis, Minn., (Region 7); John D. Robinson, Dallas, Texas, (Region 10); and James T. Wilcox III, Roy, Wash., (Region 13).

The newly appointed and reappointed members will serve three-year terms that expire May 31, 2004.

The National Fluid Milk Processor Promotion Board is composed of 15 fluid milk processors from 15 geographic regions, and five at-large members. At least three at-large members must be fluid milk processors and at least one must be from the general public. The board was established by the Fluid Milk Promotion Act of 1990 to develop and administer a coordinated program of advertising and promotion to increase the demand for fluid milk products.

The national fluid milk program is financed by a mandatory 20-cent per hundredweight assessment on all fluid milk processed and marketed commercially in consumer-type packages in the contiguous 48 states and the District of Columbia. Processors who commercially process and market 500,000 pounds or less per month are exempt from assessments.

Four Teens Represent First State at 4-H National Conference

NEWARK, Del. — More than 350 4-H'ers — among them four from the First State — gathered recently for the 71st Annual National 4-H Conference in Washington, D.C.

The annual meeting, which brings together youth from across the U.S., Puerto Rico, Canada, and the U.S. Virgin Islands and serves as a leadership development opportunity for teens to address current issues and to help plan the direction of 4-H.

Representing the First State at the meeting were Kelly Glanden, Wyoming; Chris Tinsman, Georgetown; Dusti Vanderwende, Greenwood; and Karen Vattilana, Wilmington.

According to Ted Palmer, University of Delaware Extension agent for Sussex County who accompanied the teens, the 4-H'ers were selected for their leadership ability and for their citizenship. High school sophomores or juniors are chosen, he said, so they have the option of returning the following year.

"The National Conference provides an opportunity for these leaders to do something specific to further the work of 4-H in the state," said Palmer. "This year the leaders decided to start a teen council at the state level."

Palmer said that councils already exist at the state level with 4-H'ers from each club represented. The council works in conjunction with committees to plan and coordinate all activities and special events for the year. The new state council would plan state activities, he said.

"Kelly Glanden presented the idea to the Kent County 4-H Council soon after returning from Washington," said Palmer. "The other kids are talking with their councils now and plan to schedule their first meeting in the near future."

Palmer said the week-long Washington-based conference consisted of about 10 focus teams as well as operation committees and various workshops and seminars. In addition to their meetings at the Conference Center, the teens traveled to Capitol Hill, where they met with their U.S. representatives and senators.

Two topics discussed were the Centennial of the 4-H in 2002 and the Younger Americans Act. This Act, to be introduced into Congress this year, will provide $5.75 billion in the next five years for youth development programs in local communities.

The annual 4-H meeting that convenes in Washington each year has had a rich history of conferences since their genesis during the depression years, Palmer explained.

"The first meeting was held in 1930," he said, "when the teens camped in tents on the Capitol Green."

The 4-H program is an international youth development program, the largest in the world. In the U.S. alone, 4-H serves about 6.8 million members in all 3,067 counties throughout the nation.

Palmer said the teens he accompanied to Washington "were phenomenal. It was the first time any of them had been to the National Conference and they were terrific.

"They told me they had a great time, learned lots of new things, got lots of new ideas, and said they wouldn't have missed it for the world."

Calls On Congress

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Leland Swenson, president of the National Farmers Union (NFU) recently called on Congress to immediately develop a mechanism by which farmers can be compensated for the staggering increases in energy related costs. At a meeting of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development and Research, he urged members to take strong action to mitigate the greater-than $2 billion increase in energy costs to America's farmers and ranchers in this period of low commodity prices.

"Congress should take action to address the staggering increases in production costs associated with energy now plaguing America's agricultural producers" Swenson said.

Senators Calling On Vice President Cheney To Support Biodiesel

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) recently praised a group of 18 U.S. senators who are asking the Bush administration to include a growing role for biodiesel and ethanol in the Energy Task Force Report.

The request came in the form of a letter spearheaded by Senators Chuck Hagel (R-NE) and Tim Johnson (D-SD) to Vice President Richard Cheney, who leads the administration's Energy Task Force.

The senators stated that biodiesel and ethanol could meet three percent of the U.S. motor fuel market within 10 years — providing energy, environmental and economic benefits for the nation. A three percent market share for biodiesel and ethanol would displace about nine billion gallons of motor fuels annually or between 500,000 and 600,000 barrels of crude oil each day.

"ASA appreciates the efforts of these senators to promote domestic energy production from biodiesel," said ASA President Tony Anderson of Mount Sterling, Ohio.

"Increased biodiesel use would give a much-needed boost to soybean prices, farm income and the rural economy while reducing U.S. dependence on imported oil."

"Our rising dependence on imported petroleum has become a storm cloud over the economy," Hagel said. "To meet our future energy needs, all sources of fuel and energy must be thoroughly explored and utilized. Since biodiesel is compatible with existing diesel engine technology and infrastructure, it can be used in a number of beneficial ways."

"We in the senate are sensitive to escalating energy prices," said Senator Johnson. "Biodiesel's performance and environmental benefits make it cost-effective in the short-term as well as a good long-term tool for our national energy strategy."

Biodiesel is commonly produced from soybean oil, which is currently in heavy surplus and depresses the price of soybean and other oilseeds.

It contains no petroleum, but it can be blended easily with diesel. Biodiesel use in Europe has grown to 250 million gallons annually in the last 20 years. It is gaining popularity in the U.S. with more than 40 million successful road miles of use.

Any diesel engine can run on biodiesel, usually with no modifications to the engine. It performs comparably to diesel, with similar cetane and BTU content. Biodiesel is the safest of all fuels to use, handle and store.

It will become increasingly important as ultra-low sulfur diesel regulations are implemented because it adds lubricity that is often reduced as sulfur content drops.

Biodiesel is the only alternative fuel to have passed the rigorous Health Effects testing requirements of the Clean Air Act. Results show biodiesel reduces carcinogenic air toxics by 75-90 percent compared to diesel. The results, submitted to the EPA in 2000, also show biodiesel is non-toxic, biodegradable and free of sulfur.

Educators Reminded Of Beef Materials

DENVER, Colo. — Through a combined state and national effort, grade school and high school teachers across the United States are being reminded of the many beef industry educational materials available to them.

Checkoff-funded aids that address such topics as nutrition, the environment, consumer sciences and others are featured in a new flyer being distributed by state beef councils and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

The flyer describes and illustrates more than a dozen teachers' aids prepared by the NCBA on behalf of the Cattlemen's Beef Board and state beef councils. The materials are targeted to specific age groups and professionally written, designed and marketed with teachers in mind.

Some of the materials are provided free to teachers in grades 3-7. All materials are available to teachers through the beef industry's education web site, www.teachfree.com. Several of the materials have won national awards for their effectiveness in reaching children and getting across the beef industry's message.

Among the materials being promoted in the flyer are Eat Well Grow Strong, an educational poster for second graders; Caretakers All, an environmental program for grades 3-4; Fueled for Flight, an education kit that uses space travel to teach 5-6 grade students about how the body uses energy; Basics About Beef, a colorful 24-page booklet that covers all aspects of beef nutrition, purchasing, storing and preparation; and Facts for Your Files, a series of background sheets on numerous topics important to both consumers and the beef industry.

Land Pride Flail Mowers

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride Flail Mowers, FM20, FM30 and FM40 Series, are designed to fulfill a variety of needs from grass cutting to shredding prunings. These are the perfect choice for schools and other recreational areas where people may be present. With the rotor working in the opposite direction of travel, the cut grass is brought up and over the rotor for a more uniform dispersal of clippings.

The 30 Series Flail Mower offers 3/16-inch deck material and utilizes a threaded rod to easily offset the hitch by nearly eight-inches. The cast iron gearbox incorporates an overrunning clutch that enables the rotor to swing free to a stop when the tractor PTO has been turned off. The rear gate of the mower can be opened for easier discharge in heavy conditions, or left closed for greater mulching capabilities.

SATISFIED!

Thanks and congratulations to J.A. Horst & Sons of Clear Spring, Maryland!

Brent & Keith with father John Horst

The Horsts recently purchased a 20 x 77 Harvestore® structure, equipped with a new ForceFlo® unloader, for high moisture corn.

Structure ordered on a Thursday, built and ready to be filled on Saturday--nine days late

Let us build one for YOU!

Last fall J.A. Horst & Sons had a 20 x 80 Harvestore® structure for high moisture corn erected by Penn Jersey, with excellent results. Over winter they visited other Harvestore owners and were impressed with the quality haylage from those structures compared to their trenched hay crop silage.

Brent and John Horst with their newly-erected 25 x 80 Harvestore haylage structure with new Alliance® unloader.

Mushroom Cookery

Buying

Look for smooth, firm caps. Some peat moss on surface is acceptable. Fresh mushrooms with closed veils (underside attached) give a delicate flavor. Open veils offer a somewhat richer taste.

Storing

Refrigerate immediately and use as soon as possible. Store in paper bag to reduce moisture buildup.

Preparing

Remove any clinging particles with a damp cloth. Rinse quickly and pat dry. Never soak. Trim stems only if they are dry.

Nutrition

Mushrooms are low in calories (only 20 for 5 medium-sized White mushrooms), fat free, cholesterol-free and sodium-free. They are high in riboflavin, and a good source of niacin, panothenate and copper.

MUSHROOM STEAK

2 pounds cubed or tenderized steak
1 can water
Jiffy Mix of Bisquick
2 tablespoons dry onion soup mix (optional)
1 can mushroom soup
1 small can mushroom pieces (drained)

In frying pan, heat about 3 tablespoons vegetable oil. Roll steak in Jiffy Mix or Bisquick. Season with salt and pepper, if desired. Place in skillet and brown quickly on both sides. Empty in small bowl, mushroom soup, 1 can water, drained mushroom pieces, and onion soup mix. Stir well, pour over browned steak. Cover with lid and simmer steak at medium temperature for 10 minutes. Turn steak and simmer an additional 10 minutes.

Diana Bigelow
Blair Co. Dairy Princess

BROILED STUFFED MUSHROOMS

12 large mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped
1 cup fined soft bread crumbs
½ cup chopped cooked bacon
2 tablespoons cream
Salt and freshly ground pepper, rosemary, or oregano to taste

Preheat broiler. Remove and chop the mushroom stems. In a skillet, heat one tablespoon butter, add the onions and chopped mushroom stems, and cook about two minutes. Add crumbs, bacon, enough cream to moisten the mixture and seasonings. Place the mushroom caps on a baking sheet and brush with remaining butter, melted. Broil cup side down, in a preheated broiler about two minutes. Invert and fill with the stuffing. Brush with melted butter and broil about three minutes longer.

Hot Asparagus Egg Salad combines mushrooms and asparagus for a springtime taste.

Mushrooms In Minutes

Some quick ways to mix nutritious mushrooms into your diet:

- Toss sliced white mushrooms into a salad, or tuck them into a pita pocket with your favorite sandwich filling.
- Saute a big batch of mushrooms (just one kind or a mix) and add to a pasta sauce, casserole or pizza.
- Simmer quartered shiitake or other mushrooms in a soup or stew.
- Roast or grill portabella caps to serve as a vegetarian main dish, or put them in buns with lettuce, tomato and other burger trimmings.
- Stir sauteed mushrooms into scrambled eggs, or fold them into an omelet.

1¼ cups water
1 teaspoon lemon juice
2 cups fresh asparagus pieces, cooked and drained
½ cup chopped lean cooked ham
1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Preheat oven to 400°F.

Cut ½-inch off tops of rolls. With fork, scrape out insides of bottoms of rolls, leaving ½-inch on bottom and sides. Save crumbs and roll tops for another use. Place rolls on baking sheet and bake until crisp and lightly browned, about 6 to 8 minutes.

In medium saucepan, stir together sauce mix and cornstarch. Slowly stir in water until mixture is smooth. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Remove from heat and stir in lemon juice.

Stir in asparagus, ham, and mushrooms. Gently fold in eggs. Cook over low heat just until heated through, 2 or 3 minutes. Place rolls on serving plates and fill each with about 1 cup of mixture.

Makes 4 servings.

LINGUINE WITH MUSHROOM CAESAR SAUCE

8 ounces linguine, uncooked
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup sliced onion
1 pound fresh white mushrooms, sliced (about 5 cups)
1 teaspoon minced garlic
7-ounces roasted red peppers, drained, chopped
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
1½ cups small Caesar or Italian-flavored croutons
⅓ cup grated parmesan cheese

Fill a large saucepan with salted water; bring to a boil. Add linguine, cook until pasta is firm-tender, about 10 minutes.

Drain, reserving ½ cup cooking liquid; set aside. Transfer pasta to a large serving bowl; cover to keep warm.

Meanwhile, in a large skillet over medium-high heat, heat olive oil until hot. Add onion, cook, stirring occasionally, until crisp-tender, about 5 minutes. Reduce heat to medium; add mushrooms and garlic; cook, stirring occasionally, until mushrooms are tender and just release their liquid, about six minutes. Stir in roasted red peppers, salt and black pepper; cook until heated through, about one minute. Add the reserved cooking liquid; pour over linguine. Stir in croutons and parmesan cheese. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

MUSHROOM QUICHE

⅔ cup sliced mushrooms
1 small onion, finely chopped
4 slices cooked, crumbled bacon (optional)
⅓ cup shredded cheese
3 large eggs
1⅓ cup milk or half and half
Salt and pepper
1 pie crust

Crumble bacon over bottom of cooked pie shell. Pour egg mixture on top and bake at 375 degrees for 35-40 minutes until top is golden brown and knife inserted in center comes out clean. Let stand 15-20 minutes before serving.

Note: Quiche can be prepared a day ahead, cooked, and refrigerated covered. To serve bring to room temperature or microwave on low 3-5 minutes.

Asparagus Spring Fever

In spring a food lover's fancy turns to thoughts of asparagus. In ancient times harvesting the wild asparagus, famous for their medicinal qualities, was a springtime ritual. These days the ritual is more likely to take place in the produce aisles of the supermarket.

Asparagus folklore credits the delicious green spears with everything from curing toothaches to being a reproductive tonic. Today we know that just five stalks of asparagus is an excellent source of folic acid, a B vitamin that is associated with a decreased risk of neural tube birth defects. Asparagus is also a good source of vitamin C and carotenoids. Our bodies use some carotenoids to make vitamin A, while others are strong disease-fighting antioxidants. Quick cooking best preserves the distinctive taste and nutritional bang of asparagus. Choose spears that are about the same size so they will cook evenly. Break or cut off the tough ends of the asparagus and rinse the spears thoroughly in cool water to be sure they are free of sand. At this point you are only minutes away from enjoying this simple, but elegant vegetable.

You can microwave asparagus, stir-fry them, cook them in boiling water or roast them in a hot oven (450 degrees) with a little olive oil. But it only takes a few minutes until they are crisp-tender, so check them after about four minutes.

Warm asparagus are delicious with a little olive oil or butter and a squeeze of lemon juice. The nutty flavor of toasted sesame seeds is also a good match with the fresh taste of asparagus. My kids like them just plain and I confess to overlooking the occasional episodes of mealtime dueling asparagus.

A bowl of chilled asparagus is an invitation to create a wonderful salad or finger food. Wrap them with thin slices of ham, pair them with tomatoes and hard cooked eggs or top asparagus with thin rings of red onions. The opportunities are endless and the results always taste great. Asparagus with Red Pepper Sauce is one of my favorites. It's delicious, beautiful, easy to do ahead for a crowd and packed with nutrients.

Asparagus Is Nutritional Winner

One of the very first spring messengers of the garden is the perennial asparagus spear. It stands alone in its unique and simple gourmet qualities. Asparagus is related to onions, garlic and members of the lily family.

Asparagus season is short. The bulk of its harvest is generally late April through early June, with its heaviest bearing in May.

Not only is asparagus a culinary delight, it is also a nutritional winner. Generally, raw asparagus ranks high in vitamins A, B-complex and C, and is also rich in minerals from the soil, particularly potassium and zinc. Nibble on some tender asparagus raw for its full flavor and nutritional value. As other vegetables, it will lose some, though not all, of its B-complex and vitamin C during the cooking process. It contains no fat and only 35 calories per one cup serving.

Cooking Tips

- Snap off or remove with a knife the bottommost woody part of the spear.
- Try tender asparagus spears raw. Chop into a salad, or enjoy with a dip.
- Asparagus is best cooked simply. Here are two suggestions:
- Arrange spears loosely in a skillet with an inch of lightly salted boiling water. Simmer for 3-5 minutes or until bright green and tender, but not mushy. Remove from heat and run under cold water to stop cooking process.
- In a tall covered pot, steam asparagus upright with approximately an inch of water for 10 minutes or until tender. This method cooks the tougher bottoms more thoroughly while gently steaming the tender tops.
- Try serving asparagus warm topped with butter, lemon and a sprinkle of Parmesan cheese.
- Try serving cold with a simple vinaigrette, or try olive oil with fresh squeezed lemon and a sprinkle of salt.
- Try them on your kids. They're mild in flavor and fun to chomp down, raw or cooked.

Storage Tips

- Refrigerate immediately and use as soon as possible. Asparagus' sugars will turn rapidly to starches, reducing flavor quickly.
- Wrap asparagus in a damp cloth and store in the hydrator drawer of the refrigerator. An alternate storage technique to retain vitality is to bundle spears with a rubber band and place upright in a container with an inch of water.

Asparagus Patties

1 pound asparagus
3 green onions, sliced
1 tablespoon oil
1 teaspoon dried basil
¼ cup almonds or walnuts
½ cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup cooked rice or bulgur
2 eggs beaten

Trim tough ends of asparagus and discard. Cut spears into ¼-inch pieces, steam until tender and set aside to cool. Saute green onions in oil until soft. Stir in basil and set aside. Preheat over to 250 degrees. Place almonds on baking sheet and toast in oven until slightly browned. Place in a food processor and grind to a fine meal. In a medium-sized mixing bowl, combine almond meal, bread crumbs, salt, and rice. Stir in eggs. Add steamed asparagus and green onions to egg mixture and mix well. Heat a lightly oiled griddle over medium-high heat or heat an electric skillet to 375 degrees. Drop mixture by tablespoonfuls onto preheated surface and spread to form patties. Cook until brown on each side. Serve hot. Makes 2 servings.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Relentlessly it hammers away.

Whistling, roaring, it sweeps down the ridge from the northwest, bending the grasses, clattering limbs overhead, tumbling a stray, empty calf-feed bag on its way toward the lower yard. End-over-end the layered paper flies, somersaulting across a barren stretch of yard, finally snagged by the ultra-thorny rose bush at the spring house.

A bit later, it shifts direction.

Now it blusters up from the south, scattering cats as it topples over a sturdy plastic lawn chair on the back porch, twists towels from the wash line, knocks down the damp mop propped outside to air-dry.

Occasionally, it even bears down over the hill from the east, carrying a damp chill hinting of its origin over the ocean, almost bordering on classic, old nor'easter behavior.

But no matter which direction this spring's ever-present wind blows from lately, it brings dust. It's been some time since we had a May so dusty, so dry, so desert-like. And that, frankly, is pretty scary.

Spirals of airy beige stir daily on the field road below the house, itty-bitty twisters, "dust-devils," dancing a twirling ballet down the dirt path to disappear back stage behind the green curtain of the woods.

Each pass of a tractor, or of one of the field trucks hauling chopped forage, brings a less dainty stampede of road dust. Recurring waves of the gritty, beige cloud assault my clean laundry — what hasn't blown off the line, anyway — then silently sift in through the open kitchen windows.

Little wonder our house is endlessly dusty. One recent warm, sunny, wind-driven afternoon, I reluctantly yanked down all north-faced open windows of the house; every passing piece of equipment sent another dust-devil pirouetting around the living room.

One of the perpetually damp places around the farm is our low-lying back yard. Often during May, we'll have tiny springs oozing up through the grass. But, crossing the lawn with water for the asparagus patch last week — something rarely needed during its harvest season — I was astounded to notice cracks in the soil of that shaded, moisture-prone area.

The higher edge of the garden, which also squishes with mini-seeps in extremely wet years, is so dry that all the soil just fell away from roots of young raspberry plants I dug last week for relocation. I crammed them into a temporary holding container, shook soil around the roots, flooded them with water and crossed my fingers that they transplant under such dry conditions.

Even the bare-ground section of lawn undergoing renovation has remained just that. Dusty, dry, bare ground, rearranged periodically with a drag behind the lawn tractor for leveling level and to surface any large stones. Even a section hand-raked for seeding has not yet sprouted weeds, an almost unimaginable circumstance.

Stirred with the wind's frequent blusters are thousands — millions — of tiny dandelion seeds, carried on their wind-floating-fluff like so many tiny hot-air balloons. They float skywards in the breezes, colliding with maple tree droppings of immature seed pods which take refuge on chairs and pile up in porch corners. Seems the wind is stirring up everything but what we really need, which is several days worth of good, soaking, heavily-laden rainclouds.

Weeks ago, late winter probably, I penned a lament about the-then-seemingly endless mud. Followed by endless wind blowing endless dust.

In a world of X-treme sports, and populated by the X-generation, I guess it's only natural to have X-cessive weather swings. And now a good, soaking stretch of rain would be X-cellent.

Let's hope we can X-pect it soon.

and seeded
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 tablespoons raspberry vinegar
1½ tablespoons chopped fresh basil
½ teaspoon salt
freshly ground pepper
1½ pounds fresh asparagus, trimmed bell pepper, basil, Parmesan cheese (garnish)

Coarsely chop bell peppers. Heat olive oil in a large skillet. Add peppers and garlic; cook over medium heat for about 15 minutes or until peppers are softened, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and let cool slightly. Place in blender or food processor and puree until smooth; stir in vinegar, basil, salt and pepper. Cook asparagus spears in boiling water for 4 to 5 minutes until crisp-tender; drain. Spoon red pepper sauce on a platter and arrange asparagus over sauce. Garnish with thin slices of bell pepper, basil and Parmesan if desired. Makes 4 servings.

It's Your First Paycheck As A Teen-ager

You've just been hired for the greatest summer job ever. You'll have to fill out some forms to get the payroll process started with your new employer. And you'll have to take responsibility for managing your earnings.

The first form you'll have to complete is the IRS W-4, the Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate. Fill in your name, address, and social security number in the appropriate blanks. If you are living at home with your parents and they are providing all or nearly all of your support, you will check the single box and claim zero allowances.

This information tells the payroll department how to compute your federal income tax. The federal income tax is a graduated tax, meaning that the percentage of your earnings that is taken from your paycheck will vary depending on your personal circumstances. As a general rule, the more you make, the higher the taxing percentage. A single person has a higher percentage than a married person with the same income.

Depending on where you live, you may have to complete a similar form for state income and/or local income taxes. Your employer may ask you to fill out other forms as well. For instance, your paycheck may be deposited directly into your bank account in which case you will need to provide your account number. On pay day you will receive a paper notice of the transaction but no actual check.

So now it's you first payday. You are making $6 an hour and you worked 30 hours last week. You'll be getting $180, right?

Wrong!

You forgot the taxes that will be deducted. We already talked about federal income taxes. State income taxes will vary by state. Pennsylvania has a flat tax rate of 2.8 percent times your gross pay. (Gross pay is the amount you earned before taxes, in our example $180.)

Other states have different systems. Your local tax may be flat, graduated or there may not even be a local income tax. Then there are social security and Medicare taxes. Social security is 6.2 percent of gross pay and Medicare is 1.45 percent. So your net pay is likely to be between $150 and $160 dollars.

Shocking, isn't it. Not fair!

Just remember the road you drove over and the school you attend are paid for with tax dollars.

For further explanation of federal income tax, see www.irs.gov/taxi/index.html and click on It's Payday.

So now you have all this money. Good fun, here we come! Wait a minute, let's think about this. Do you want to go to college? Is the French Club going to Paris next spring? Will you have to pay your own car insurance? Set some long term financial goals for yourself. Then design a plan so you save money to meet these goals. First, find out what your necessary summer expenses will be.

Will you have bus fare, gasoline costs, or special clothing requirements? After you have budgeted for these necessary expenses, set aside a specific amount into a savings account each payday and keep your hands off of it. You may be able to arrange with your bank to automatically transfer a specific amount to a savings account each payday. This works if you receive the same amount each paycheck and you have direct deposit. Then watch the rest of your spending to get the most for your money.

If you don't have a credit card, don't get one. If you do, leave it hidden in your sock drawer. Likewise, your ATM card. You can avoid unnecessary spending if you don't have ready access to money. Often, you'll find you don't really need an item once you think about it.

Ask your parents how they manage their money. They may not be comfortable giving you specific dollar amounts but will share the mechanisms they have used to meet their goals. Have fun at your first job. The good money management habits you start now will last your lifetime.

Remembering Ancestors

National Yoder Reunion In The Planning

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — "When you reach a certain age, you become more appreciative of the relatives that came before us and allowed us to have the things we have today," Saranna Miller said.

In the past 10 years, Saranna has researched genealogy, especially her mother's line — the Yoders.

The fascinating story of the first Yoders to come to America and settle in Oley Valley is part of the celebration planned for the National Yoder Reunion, July 20-21.

According to Saranna, two brothers — Hans and Yost Yoder — are believed to be the first Yoders to come to America. Han's wife and two children died on the ship, leaving him with one young son when he embarked in 1709.

Hans remarried. Although details of the second marriage are skimpy, Saranna said, during that era of settlement in the new world, few women would have been available for marriage. It was not uncommon for 14-year-old girls to be given in marriage.

"Marriages were not necessarily arranged for love but by who was available at the needed time," Saranna said. "They (ancestors) made their marriages work. They had goals and roles they needed to fulfill in order to survive."

Survival was the most important goal.

Hans is said to have been a very industrious man who transformed the wilderness never before seen by white men into a productive farm. On it, Hans built a flax seed oil mill, grist mill, tannery, forge, cider press, and sawmill.

Hans' brother Yost is said to have enjoyed trapping and hunting. He spent weeks in the Blue Mountains to obtain hides and skins to trade and barter in Philadelphia, a two-days walk from the Yoder homestead.

Both brothers maintained congenial relationships with the Lenni-Lenape Indians, who still populated the area where they settled. The compatibility between the native tribes and the pioneers is credit to William Penn, who insisted on paying the Indians for the land, unlike settlers in other areas of the new world.

Although the original log cabins are no longer in existence, later houses and buildings are still standing.

Hans and Yost were said to have come from a successful family in Switzerland. The brothers were fleeing religious persecution, like many of the other immigrants from Steffisburg, Switzerland. Today, most of the thousands of Yoders continue to live within a 50-mile radius of the original homestead. But some Yoders migrated to Mifflin County, other states, and Canada.

"Regardless of where Yoders live today, research shows that we are all related to the original Oley settlement," Saranna said.

During the reunion, hundreds are expected to return to the homestead for the National Yoder Reunion.

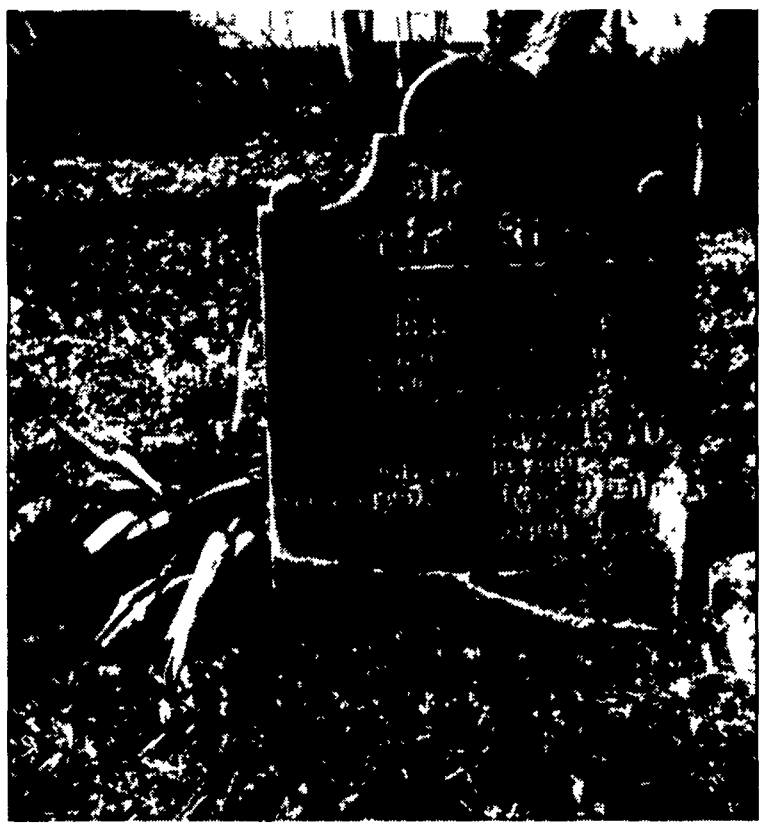
Saranna said that two main branches of Yoders are referred to as the Amish Yoders and the reformed Yoders. Both branches are believed to have been related and have originated from the same area of Switzerland. But the Amish Yoders arrived later than the Hans and Yost. The reunion is for both branches of Yoders.

The reunion will recount fascinating history about the two branches. Reservations must be made for the events that include an Amish tour scheduled for Friday, July 20, and the Oley Valley Bus Tour and Revolutionary Military encampment, Saturday, July 21. Representing both the German regiment and Germans serving under the county militia system will be re-enactors from the Tulpehocken Associators, Inc., a nonprofit, educational volunteer organization dedicated to the authentic portrayal of the life of the 18th century soldier and his family.

"We don't have diaries, so we don't know exactly how Hans and Yost lived, but we have uncovered court records, papers, and have second-hand verbal accounts of history," Susanna said of her heritage. "They came seeking freedom, independence, and a better way of life. They were industrious and productive. Most early Yoders were farmers and the love of the land was important to them."

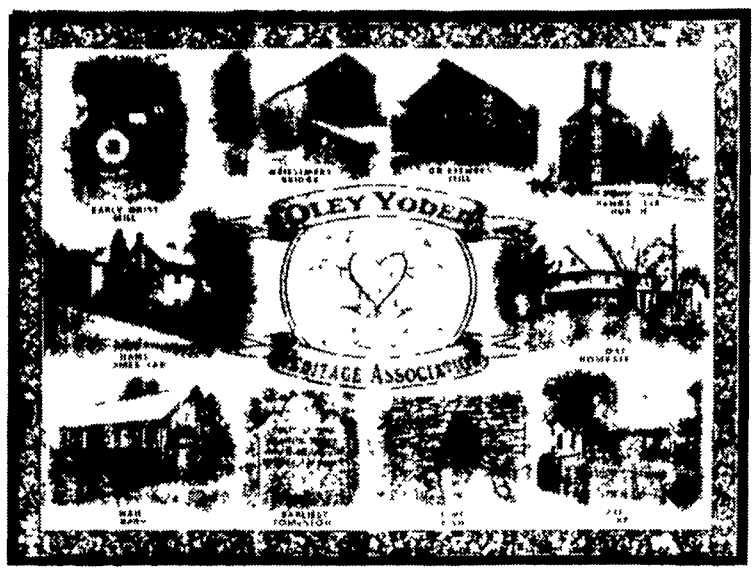
For more information about the reunion, write to Oley Yoder Heritage Association, 415 State St., Pottstown, PA 19454 or e-mail pry884@aol.com

"Genealogy is addictive. It's like a huge puzzle. While you're searching to fit one piece, you uncover other pieces (facts) that take you in a whole different direction," said Saranna Miller of searching the Yoder family history. She considers herself fortunate to have several heirlooms passed down through the generations. These include the original paper on which her great-great grandmother practiced the German script alphabet and numbers dated in 1829 and her great-great grandparents marriage certificate dated 1843.



The 1880 Daniel Yoder tombstone is believed to be the oldest Yoder tombstone in America. The descendant of Hans Yoder is buried in the Pleasantville Cemetery, which is a restoration and preservation project of the Oley Yoder Heritage Association.

From left, Joe Yoder, Richard H. Yoder, Ken Yoder, and Martha Yoder listen to some of the history that Richard recounts. Richard has researched the Yoder family history for 25 years and is credited with much of the historical accounts for reunion tours.



Yoder blanket throws are being sold as a fundraiser for the Yoder research. Pictured are places with significant interest to the Yoder family. The throw sells for $65 plus $5 if shipped.

George Yoder examines a cider press thought to be identical to one that had existed on the Hans Yoder Homestead. Research uncovered a sizable orchard and records that show that Johnny Appleseed spent several summers at the Yoder homestead.

Learning To Be A Father

"I Should Have Read A Book!"

I will never forget the early morning ride on the way to the hospital for the delivery of our first child. I woke up about 2:00 a.m. with pains about five minutes apart. The hospital was about 35 miles away, which would take us around 45 minutes to drive.

About halfway there as the pains started to progress to two minutes apart, my husband suddenly had a revelation. He very seriously turned to me and said, "We don't know anything about being parents. We didn't even read a book. What do we know about being 'good' parents?"

It was at that moment that he realized (and me too) that we were actually going to have a baby. Oh yes, we knew this all along, but the reality hit that early cold February morning. Not only a baby boy was born, but a father and a mother were born as well.

Learning to be a parent is like traveling along a long country road—there are many hills and valleys as well as twists and turns. You just hope that you end up on a hill and not too worn out from the trip still looking for a flat straight stretch of road.

By the way, the trip will never end. You're always a parent no matter how old your children become.

You learn to be a parent by doing and from observing everyone else around you, but mostly you learn from your own parents. After all, they trained you since you were born. As children we pick up their bad and good parenting traits. Where did my husband learn to be a good father? Of course, we know he didn't read a book. He learned from his own father as well as the men around him who cared about him.

Research shows that children who grow up with fathers who stay involved in their lives tend to enjoy all kinds of benefits: from better school performance to less trouble with the law, to better careers and relationships with others.

Many fathers get involved in sports or other past times that they are interested in. The important thing is that they become involved with their children somehow whether it is music, fishing, sports, chess, cars, cooking, or whatever the special interest they can share together.

Children need their fathers to be involved.

Children learn from watching their fathers.

Take a few minutes and close your eyes. Imagine that you are a young child again, and you are with your father. What are you doing together? What is he saying to you? For many of you, this experience is probably one that makes you feel happy, safe, and secure.

Are you providing these same types of experiences for your children? How many times a week are you doing something active with your children?

Garret D. Evans, assistant professor of clinical psychology, University of Florida, explains the importance of a father's role, "In many ways, our father is one of the strongest influences on how we raise our own children. Through our connections with our dad, we build a sense of identity for the family. We may pass on family traditions, values, and opinions that continue for generations."

Evans further states that a father not only carries his father's traits into his parenting style, but he adds his new values and traditions as well. This is what makes your own father unique. It also gives hope to children that they can improve on the foundation their own father gave them. Most people would agree that no one is perfect, so there is always room for improvement at being a parent. It is important to take the good traits that have been role modeled to you by your father as well as other men around you, and adopt them to your own parenting practices.

How do you know if you are involved enough with your children and spending true "quality" time? Evans suggests asking yourself these four basic questions:

Are your children the center of your attention or are you just trying to keep them busy while you're doing other things?

Are you doing something they would like to do?

Are you saving enough time and energy every day so that you can spend it with them or are you playing or interacting with them when it is convenient?

Are you happy just spending time with your children with no particular purpose or goal in mind?

If you answered "yes" to all these questions, you are more than likely spending some real quality time with your children.

If you came up short on some of these answers, then how do you begin to start getting more involved?

Make a plan setting aside some time to do an activity with your children that you haven't done much with them before. This could just mean 15 minutes helping with homework, throwing the baseball, or even playing tea party.

This may seem like a small effort, but take a good look at your child's face while you are doing it. There is nothing more gratifying for a parent as looking in the eyes of true happiness. It only costs your time; no cash is needed.

Did you need to read a book to learn this? The key to successful parenting is to take the time to do things with your children throughout their lives. Not just at age 8 during Little League season, but even at 17 when they act as though they don't want you around. They need you as much at age 17 to learn how to become an adult as they did when they were one learning how to walk.

This is what the books says, and this is what our parents learned after raising us.

QUESTION — A York County reader wants a recipe for Chicken-Peanut Casserole that tastes like that served at Hershey Farms Restaurant.

ANSWER — A Pine Grove reader requested a recipe for bean soup to cook in a big, black butcher kettle. Thanks to Mrs. David Fisher for sending one she clipped from her local newspaper. She writes that the recipe has been used since Civil War days and is made every summer during the Bean Soup Festival held in McClure.

McClure Bean Soup

25 pounds great northern beans or navy beans
15-16 pounds ground beef
6 pounds ground suet (beef tallow)
6-ounces salt
17-18 gallons water

Simply cook everything in a 35-gallon cast-iron kettle, over an open fire for 2½ hours. Continuous stirring bruises the beans, and thus creams the soup.

ANSWER — Loretta Blaine, Stevensville, requested a recipe to make ketchup. Thanks to Mrs. David Fisher for sending her favorite.

'It Tastes Like Bought Ketchup'

Sieve cooked tomatoes, then strain through a square of muslin pinned over a dishpan. Scrape the puree off with a spoon to form the base of the ketchup.

2 quarts thick tomato puree
2 tablespoons salt
2 cups vinegar
1½ cups light corn syrup
½ teaspoon red pepper or more if desired
2½ tablespoons mixed pickling spice or more if desired
2 chopped onions or more if desired

Tie red pepper, spice, and onion in a cloth bag, and add to the remaining ingredients. Bring to a slow boil and simmer for 30 minutes. Squeeze the spice bag and discard. Stir ½ cup corn starch into the ketchup and cook 10 more minutes. Pour into sterile jars and process in boiling water bath 15-20 minutes.

ANSWER — Tami Reigle requested a recipe for candied orange peels.

Candied Orange Peel

Score peel of two large oranges into quarters. Remove peel. Heat peel and six cups water to boiling. Simmer 30 minutes; drain. Repeat, cooking peel in another six cups water. Gently scrape off remaining white membrane from peel. Cut peel lengthwise into ¼-inch strips.

Heat 2 cups sugar and 1 cup water to boiling, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Add peel; simmer 45 minutes, stirring frequently. Drain mixture thoroughly. Roll peels in 1½ cups sugar, dry on waxed paper.

ANSWER — Thanks to Janet Spangler, York Springs, for sending in this recipe, which we received too late to include in our Mother's Day Tribute. She writes that her mother, Grace Klinedinst, who died 23 years ago, made this dessert for family get togethers. Janet carries on the tradition to serve her two sons, five grandchildren, and four great grand children. They love it as well. Her mother got the recipe about 40 years ago. It serves 12.

Molded Rice

1 cup river rice
16-ounce can pineapple rings packed in juice
6 or more maraschino cherries

Wash one cup rice twice. Bring 3 cups water to boil in a 2-quart saucepan. Add rice and salt (optional). Stir with a fork to loosen grains from the bottom of the pan as you reduce the heat to simmer. Add a teaspoon butter if desired. Cover and simmer 35-40 minutes until water is absorbed or until rice is dry.

Remove from heat, add:

3 cups plus 2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup milk or more if needed

Stir until mixed well. Set to cool slightly. To mold, use two serving dishes of comparable size. She uses 10-inch china pie pan or 8-inch square baking dish.

Lay six pineapple rings on double sheet of paper towels to drain. Place 8 maraschino cherries cut in half in pineapple holes.

Spray pan with vegetable spray.

Lay a pineapple ring in center of pan. Arrange remaining rings around it. Lay cut cherries in center of rings. Be sure cut side is up. Pour rice into pan. Cover the fruit evenly. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until cool.

To unmold, lay the other pan on top and turn it over quickly. Cut rings in half to serve better.

ANSWER — Dotty Gaul, Douglassville, wanted to know how to make the pork barbecue sandwiches like those served at the Blue Parasol, Harrisburg. Paul of Williamstown writes that he doesn't remember that restaurant but he does remember the pork barbecue sandwiches served by the Blue Pig and Restaurant and Barbecue Cottage in Harrisburg. These same pork barbecue sandwiches can be purchased from Red Rabbit Drive-In Restaurant on Rt. 322 across from the Clarks Ferry Bridge just before the Rt. 322 and Rt. 11⅞5 split.

June Dairy Month is "mooving" into the calendar of events. That means it's time to send in your favorite recipe using dairy products for Lancaster Farming's annual dairy recipe drawing.

June Dairy Month salutes dairy farmers everywhere for their hard work in providing milk, which we so often take for granted. Lancaster Farming's annual drawing reminds us of all the wonderful dairy products available to produce culinary delights.

To enter the drawing, select your favorite recipe, which must include a substantial amount of at least one dairy product. These ingredients count as a dairy product: milk, cream, sour cream, whipped cream, butter, yogurt, buttermilk, dry milk, ice cream, and all hard and soft cheeses.

Please check your ingredients carefully. Margarine and non-dairy substitutes such as frozen whipped topping do not qualify as dairy products.

Dairy recipes are needed for appetizers, soups, breads, entrees, vegetables, desserts, beverages, snacks, and salads.

Clearly print or type your recipe entry. Be sure to give accurate measurements, temperatures, times, and sizes of baking dishes to use. We reserve the right to disqualify entries if these guidelines are not followed.

With your entry, include a few paragraphs about yourself and your family. Although it is not required, a photograph of you and of your family is preferred. We and our readers love to "see" the people who send in the recipes.

Photographs will be returned if you write your name and address on the back of the picture.

Only one entry per family allowed. This contest is for adults who are at least 18 years old. We require this because children who send in recipes often inadvertently miss measurements, ingredients or a part of the instructions.

Send your recipe, photo, and accompanying information with your complete address. If we do not have your complete mailing address, we cannot send your prize if you win.

Send entries immediately. Entries must be postmarked by June 1 to be eligible for the drawing. The state dairy princess and alternates will select the winners. Recipe entries will be printed throughout the month of June. A list of the winners will be printed in the June 30 issue.

Send entries to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Dairy Drawing, P.O. Box 609, 1 E. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've been traveling. A one-day trip to Washington, D.C. took us to the National Zoo where we saw the famed giant pandas.

The whole afternoon was ours to roam the hilly area on a hot day. We saw elephants, giraffes and a rhinoceros.

One of the most interesting places was "Amazonia." Here they had a tropical forest with birds and also tanks of giant catfish. We walked and walked while many other couples our age sat in the shade and waited for the bus to come.

Earlier in the morning we toured the National Postal Museum next to Union Station. Even the train station was impressive with its high vaulted ceiling. The lower level had many types of food stands and we had lunch there. It was a good place to watch people.

The Postal Museum told the story of mail delivery in Colonial times and the Pony Express. It houses the largest collection of stamps and has more than 13 million objects. Three mail planes were hanging from the ceiling and there was a replica of a railway mail car.

Then early the next morning Allen and I headed for Atlanta, Georgia with a load of finely planed cherry boards for our son to use in his house. We also have a daughter living in the area so we visited both of them for a week.

As the trip was 1,600 miles we made it in two days each way. There were lots of stops at rest areas along the highway. You never saw as many big, big trucks as we saw along Route 81. Often the posted speed limits was 70 miles per hour.

On the way we stopped at Biltmore Estate in Asheville, North Carolina to see the 250-room house of George Vanderbilt. His first forester was Gifford Pinchot who later became the Governor of Pennsylvania. It took hundreds of workers five years to complete the house in the late 1800s. We also took a self-guided tour of their winery and azalea gardens.

Charlotte Brontë

Born on April 21, 1816, Charlotte Bronte was the daughter of an Anglican minister Along with her sisters Emily and Anne, Charlotte Bronte was a famous writer Her novel, Jane Eyre, written in 1847, is a popular book that people still read today.

Bronte's family moved to Yorkshire, England, when she was about four years old Soon after, her mother died. When Charlotte was about nine years old, she was sent to a boarding school along with her sisters Charlotte's memories of the school helped her write about a similar school in her book

After finishing school, Charlotte went to work as a teacher and governess. She did not enjoy this work, though, and in 1844, she returned home to Yorkshire to live with her father and brother It was during this time that she learned that her sisters Anne and Emily had written poetry Charlotte had been writing poems since her school days. In 1846, the three sisters published their poems under the pen names of Currer, Acton and Ellis Bell Then each of the three sisters started a novel Charlotte's novel, published in 1847, was Jane Eyre

Soon after the Bronte sisters published their novels, tragedy struck Both Emily and Anne died within two years, and Charlotte's brother, Branwell, also died Charlotte was left alone to care for her father and wife She published two more novels, Shirley in 1849 and Villette in 1853 In 1854, she married the Reverend Arthur Nicholls However, her health was not good and she died less than a year later, on March 31, 1855

Grief Through A Child's Eye

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — A significant number of children who encounter sudden changes in their lives will have unforeseen difficulties. Behavior changes may result from experiencing traumatic changes in their lives — death of a loved one, divorce, separation, severe illness, accident or violence.

A workshop dealing with these issues is scheduled June 4, 7 p.m.-9 p.m. at the Berks County Ag Center.

Claudia J. Lentz of Stepping Forward® will introduce the necessity of care and support for children experiencing trauma and grief.

Identifying, understanding and developing a plan of care for the traumatized child will help to alleviate the intense grief a child bears, but can't articulate. Inner emotions and feelings are often confusing for the child trying to adapt to the state of change.

By providing a nonjudgmental environment for the grief process to occur, adults are able to help the child talk about his or her fears and adjust to the changes in his life.

Blair County 4-H Volunteers Pave Way To Program's Success

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Today more than ever, youths have many questions about their future. Changing lifestyles, increased mobility, technology advances, communication, all have great effects on their expectations. It is these factors that make the 4-H program so effective and necessary today.

Volunteerism is the integral to the American way of life, and the key to the success of the 4-H program. I voluntarily came involved in the 4-H program as a youngster and received much guidance from the volunteer leaders in the clubs in which I participated. As I look around, many of the volunteers in Blair County all grew up in 4-H, or knew of it as youth, and are now volunteering to help mold the youth in our county.

These volunteers are the backbone of a program that delivers practical educational experiences to Blair County Youth, as well as youth all across the nation. The time, travel, energy and support that the Blair County volunteers contribute is valued highly by all those involved in the 4-H program.

These volunteer leaders help shape 4-H youth into tomorrow's leaders. These volunteers not only give leadership to 4-H experiences; they keep the program relevant to the local community needs and interests. Today, more than 50 4-H adult volunteers in Blair County work with approximately 300 members from 8- to 19-years-old. These volunteers share their skills and experiences by assisting young people with a variety of 4-H projects and activities.

Volunteers do not have to be experts in specialized subject matter areas. They can rely on the Cooperative Extension Service at Penn State University, to provide them with training, educational materials and resources to use in the 4-H program. The land grant system makes 4-H uniquely qualified to meet both the constant changing needs of both the youth and adults.

Many people question why they should become a volunteer, being a volunteer in the 4-H program gives you many rewards. This opportunity allows you to help youth become better citizens, helps you learn about yourself as well as youth, and gives you the opportunity to broaden your circle of friends, and acquaintances.

Many times leaders do not realize exactly what they are to a child. In doing some research, I came up with the definition of leader:

- A leader is a person who guides or directs.
- A glutton for punishment, a person who offers themselves willingly for services without pay.
- A friend, a person attached to another by feelings of affection or personal regard.
- A teacher, a person who instructs.
- A protector or guardian.
- An adviser/counselor, one who gives advice.
- A role-model, and example for imitation.
- A public passenger vehicle, used to transport many individuals from place to place.
- A person who answers any questions asked.

As you can see, a volunteer leader is many different things all at once, and all these are very important to the youth in Blair County, as well as youth across the nation.

Anyone who is interested in becoming an important part in the life of some Blair County youths, call (814) 940-5989.

National 4-H Council Announces National Volunteer Recognition Effort

CHEVY CHASE, Md. — The Salute to Excellence Fund has been established to recognize the contributions and achievements of outstanding 4-H volunteer leaders.

On an annual basis, states and territories will nominate meritorious candidates for selection of two National 4-H Volunteers of the Year.

The Salute to Excellence Volunteers of the Year will each receive a monetary award of up to $10,000 and round-trip travel for each of them and a guest to Washington, D.C. for the recognition ceremony. This program has been initiated through the vision and generosity of Gene and Sharon Swackhamer, of Sparks, Maryland. Gene Swackhamer is a former national 4-H council board of trustees' member and board treasurer.

Lynn D.W. Luckow, national 4-H council board of trustees' chair said, "It is the selfless dedication of volunteer leaders that makes a difference in the lives of young people as they develop important life skills. I'm thrilled to know that citizens are stepping forward with donations to ensure that 4-H will be able to encourage other adults to become volunteer leaders by recognizing outstanding volunteer performance."

"The goal of Salute to Excellence is to recognize two outstanding volunteer leaders each year beginning in 2002, 4-H's Centennial year. Volunteers play a vital role in 4-H. Last year, 494,260 adult volunteer leaders donated their time and energy to the 4-H youth development program," said Don Floyd, national 4-H council president and CEO. One award will be conferred for lifetime achievement and the other for outstanding performance by a volunteer with less than 10 years of experience. Floyd further said, "It is the dream of many associated with 4-H that these awards will become the 'Oscars of 4-H' celebrating the very best of volunteer leader success."

As the Salute to Excellence Fund reached the funding midpoint this week, National 4-H Council honored 97 donors from 22 states and Puerto Rico, whose contributions to the fund total $150,000. In appreciation of the hard work of the many volunteers and staff who made the program a reality, the board of trustees of national 4-H council authorized an $11,000 gift to the fund, matching a contribution by a donor earlier this year.

National 4-H Council works to advance the 4-H youth development movement to build a world in which youth and adults learn, grow, and work together as catalysts for positive change. National 4-H Council partners with the Cooperative Extension System, communities, and other organizations to provide technical support and training, develop curricula, create model programs, and promote positive youth development to fulfill its mission.

The National 4-H Conference Center, a full-service conference facility, and the National Supply Service, the USDA nationally authorized agent for the interstate sales of paraphernalia bearing the 4-H name and emblem, are also under the management of National 4-H Council. The 4-H name and emblem is protected under 18 U.S.C. 707. National 4-H Council is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization.

Adams County 4-H'ers Attend Science Retreat

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Adams County 4-H members participated in the Regional Super Science Pre-Teen 4-H Retreat held at Refreshing Mountain Camp, near Denver, Lancaster County. The program focused on helping 4-H youth become better acquainted with 4-H youth throughout the area and introduce them to a variety of life skills through science and new 4-H projects.

The program began Friday evening and concluded Sunday morning. Eight workshops were offered: 1) "What Buzzin;" 2) "Soils Alive;" 3) "Rocket Cars;" 4) "Duck and Cover;" 5) "Pop-up Cards;" 6) "Electric Excitement;" 7) "Elegant Earthworms;" and 8) "Food Fundamentals."

Adams County 4-H members participating were: Jessi Nolan, Fairfield; Sarah and Jessica Gray, Biglerville; Lee Wilkinson and Sara Myers, Aspers; Amy Becker and Shaun Scott, Gardners; Kyle Tuckey, Dwight Byers, Amanda and Amber Coinbert, Biglerville; and Cody Riley, Gettysburg.

Amber Grimm and Josh Buckley, Abbottstown served as teen counselors for the over 100 youth from eight counties who participated. 4-H Youth Program Makes Major Contribution To Nation

STROUDSBURG (Monroe Co.) — 4-H, one of America's largest informal educational programs for boys and girls, ages eight to 18, makes a major contribution to our nation by helping youth acquire knowledge and develop life skills that help them become self-directing, productive and contributing members of our society.

Monroe County 4-H challenges you to take a look at us now and you'll see more than young people talking about the future — you'll see them becoming the future. 4-H members find that learning can be fun. 4-H projects range from sewing, foods and nutrition, rocketry, theatre arts and almost everything in between. In addition to working on a 4-H project in their club setting, members give demonstrations, attend camp, participate in county and state events just for 4-H'ers and have fun with the new friends they've made.

Monroe County 4-H invites interested adults to work with our young people in the 4-H program. We need adults to teach members about caring for animals, growing plants, and caring for the environment, as well as other topics. If you are interested in helping children get involved in today's issues, develop job skills, meet other kids, and just have fun we'll be happy to hear from you.

To provide a safe environment for youth involved in extension activities, Penn State Cooperative Extension has implemented a process for screening individuals who desire to work with youth. This screening process is a prerequisite for becoming a 4-H volunteer leader.

For more information on the Monroe County 4-H program, or to become a 4- leader, contact Sherri Abbruzzi, 4-H program coordinator at Penn State Cooperative Extension in Monroe County, 4499 Route 611, Stroudsburg 18360, (570) 421-6430, or e-mail at sla4@psu.edu.

Devon Horse Show And Country Fair Benefits Hospital And Area Businesses

DEVON (Chester Co.) — The Devon Horse Show and Country Fair, celebrating its 105th renewal with its annual 10-day run May 24 to June 2, brings hundreds of visitors to Philadelphia's suburbs and is a bonanza for area businesses.

Over the past five decades, Devon has not only raised $9,845,474 for its beneficiary, The Bryn Mawr Hospital, it has also added millions of dollars to the coffers of the entire area at the rate of over $5 million per year.

About 1,500 horses show at Devon, between Bet On Jazz Junior Weekend and adult week, which includes thrilling jumper classes, handsome hunters and elegant saddlebreds.

Between owners, trainers and riders, there is an average of three people per horse, resulting in bringing about 4,500 out-of-town visitors to the Devon environs.

At least 17 hotels and motels benefit from this influx, with just three of them reporting that Devon exhibitors contribute over $400,000 is business. Hotels alone profit by well over $1 million.

Restaurants also reap benefits, and, with all that additional business, it's almost impossible to get into some of the establishments along Route 30 during the show.

Exhibitors shop at the King of Prussia Mall, and those new to the area often visit historical Valley Forge or travel into historical Philadelphia.

Clothes need to be taken to local cleaners, drug stores supply many needs, and convenience stores reap a bonanza from the sale of everything from newspapers to ice and sodas.

Even local home owners benefit, selling parking in their driveways or backyards for $3, $5 and up, depending on how close they are to the show grounds.

Organizing and running The Devon Horse Show and Country Fair is also a huge business involving thousands of volunteers. Three thousand volunteers work on the fair alone, while hundreds more devote themselves to the horse show.

Leonard A. King of Malvern is president and, although his is a volunteer position, it is almost a full-time job.

King, a noted artist who has had his work exhibited at the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts in Hagerstown, Md., the National Agricultural Library, the Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh, the Palmer Museum at Penn State University and the Salmagundi Club in New York, begins painting at 4:30 or 5 a.m., and is at his Devon office on the show grounds by 10 o'clock from January on. Even in the summer, King spends a part of each day on Devon.

King is assisted by a number of vice presidents, including five who are newly elected or have new assignments this year. A great variety of businesses, some of which are involved in the show either as sponsors or advertisers, are represented by these Devon volunteers.

Timothy Maxwell of Chester Springs, a partner in the law firm Morgan, Lewis and Bockius, is a vice president and the new treasurer, and Richard M. O'Donnell of East Fallowfield, a senior vice president of the First National Bank of Chester County, is a vice president and the new secretary, as well as serving as co-chairman of the sponsorship committee.

Wade McDevitt, whose father, Richard E. McDevitt, served as show president for 25 years, is another new vice president and chairman of the development committee. McDevitt is president and CEO of the McDevitt Co., an international commercial real estate firm.

Holly Griffin of West Chester, vice president of CBIZ Benefits and Insurance, is vice president in charge of the program book, and David Robinson of Radnor, vice president of Rittenhouse Trust Co., is vice president and co-chairman of the Carriage Pleasure Drive.

The new vice presidents join Mrs. Deirdre Blain, Henry L. Collins, Rudy C. D'Allessandro, Mrs. Robert P. Floyd, Mrs. Andrea Gilbert, Harry R. Gill, Mrs. Martin Levin, Mrs. Lawrence E. MacElree, Robert J. McKeirnan, John J. Nesbitt III and Alfred D. Norris, whose responsibilities include ticket sales, grounds, trophies, sponsorship and development.

Co-chairmen of the Country Fair this year are Mrs. John M. (Candy) Guinan of Newtown Square and Mrs. Samuel F. (Lynn) Rudolph of Broomall.

The Jet Set Flyball Dog Team will perform in exhibition Friday, May 25, Carriage Racing will be held Sunday, May 27 through Tuesday, May 29, and Working Border Collies will be exhibited Friday, June 1 and Saturday, June 2.

The Country Fair is open daily from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. except Sunday, when it opens at 11 a.m. Boutiques offer a variety of specialty items, from sporting clothes to fine artwork, beautiful gold and silver jewelry and antiques. There are games, rides and food for all tastes.

General admission is $6 for adults, $3 for children under 12 and $4 for seniors over 65. Reserved seating is available, call for ticket prices. The ticket office is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the ticket office at the show grounds, or call (610) 688-2554.

LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every fisherman needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Professor Higbee's Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind... showing virtually all of the streams, rivers and lakes in each state.

Michelle Walker To Be York Dairy Princess

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — A new dairy promotion team is preparing to step into the York County limelight with Michelle Walker to wear the sparkling princess tiara for the next 12 months.

The coronation of a new York County dairy princess by currently reigning princess Heather Crowl will highlight the annual pageant beginning at 7:30 p.m, Saturday, May 26, at the York 4-H Center.

Michelle, 18, is the daughter of Leroy and Brenda Walker, Thomasville. She will graduate in June from the York County School of Technology, where she is president of the National Honor Society. Michelle attended the Governor's School for Health Care and was active with the Ambassadors for Career Education and the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership program. She plans to be an independent Mary Kay director and pursue a business major at Wilson College.

The Walker family, which includes brothers Brad, 24, and Greg, 22, owns and operates Walk-Le Farms, with 150 milking registered Holsteins and 100 acres cropped to corn and hay. Michelle owns two dairy animals and has been active in 4-H dairy and show activities. She was previously an alternate York County dairy princess.

Two ambassadors and several younger members of the promotion team will assist Michelle as she makes appearances around York County on behalf of dairy producers. Ambassadors are April Daugherty and Raechel Kilgore, and Amanda Hoover is the dairy maid.

April Daugherty, 17, is the daughter of dairy farmers Philip and Terry Daugherty, Lemon Street, York. April has worked with the princess program for several years, assisting with milk promotion events previously as a dairy maid. She is home-schooled and in her junior year of studies. April is active in 4-H livestock programs and youth activities at her church.

Raechel Kilgore, 16, is the daughter of Doug and Pam Kilgore, Airville. She is a 10th-grade student at Red Lion Area High School and a member of the FFA, as well as active in 4-H dairy showing and the dairy judging team. Along with helping on the family's dairy and crops operation, Raechel plays field hockey for the Red Lion school team.

Dairy maid Amanda Hoover has several years of promotion program experience as well. Amanda, 13, is the daughter of Paul and Rose Hoover, East Prospect, who operate a dairy goat business. She is a 4-H member with swine and goat projects, and a livestock judging participant.

Rounding out the York dairy promotion team are a bevy of enthusiastic young ladies serving as dairy misses and little misses. Dairy misses are Jelee Anstine, Carlyn Crowl, and Amy Baumgardner, with Katie Baumgardner and Amber Thoman, the youngest of the county's milk promoters, to serve as little misses.

Jelee Anstine, 9, is the daughter of Charles Anstine and Lynn Hubbard, York. The fourth grader is a Junior Girl Scout and plays the flute in her school band.

Carlyn Crowl, 9, is the daughter of Gary and Melanie Crowl, Delta. A fourth-grader, she is a member of the 4-H Milk and Money dairy club and active in school musical events and church choir.

Amy Baumgardener, 10, is the daughter of Daniel and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. Amy is in the fourth grade, participates in church group activities and a member of the Central 4-H dairy club.

Kathryn "Katie" Baumgardner, 6, is also the daughter of Daniel and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. First-grader Katie enjoys the family's farm animals and takes part in the family church girls' group.

Amber Thoman, 7, is the daughter of Gary and Gail Thoman, Dallastown. Amber is in the first grade and has her own dairy calf.

The pageant will mark the last "official" task for current York County dairy princess, Heather Crowl, completing a busy year of appearances and speaking opportunities. Just recently, Heather visited with 300 eighth-grade students during a health fair at West York Junior High School, where she manned a calcium display and offered milk and cookie treats.

Every Monday for the past several months, Heather has spent her day off from business classes visiting elementary and preschools, educating youngsters about the benefits of including milk and dairy foods in their chosen foods. Heather teaches her young listeners about how milk is produced, using posters and feed samples, shows a video, and then gets them involved in hands-on dairy food preparation making either butter or pudding.

Now finishing up her first year as a student at the Yorktowne Business Institute, Heather is pursuing a two-year medical assistance major and plans a career in the health field.

Michelle Walker's reign will kick off with a busy June Dairy Month line-up of promotions, beginning June 2 with a "cow patty" bingo benefit planned at Northern High School. Organizations interested in booking the York County dairy princess for a meeting or event appearance should contact booking coordinator Lori Baumgardner, phone (717) 432-3169.

DEP Seeks Input On Pennsylvania's Valuable Water Resources

MEADVILLE (Crawford Co.) — Four state agencies are inviting all Pennsylvanians to participate in an exciting opportunity to help shape the future of the commonwealth's valuable water resources.

Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Acting Secretary David E. Hess today asked residents to participate in scheduled public forums called "Water Is Our Future Draining Away?" to discuss Pennsylvania's current and future water resource needs.

"The information gathered at these forums will help set policies to pro tect water as a resource and an economic asset," Hess said. "We encourage citizens to come out and provide their input on water issues in their communities."

DEP, in partnership with the departments of Community and Economic Development, Conservation and Natural Resources and Agriculture, has scheduled 15 public forums across the Commonwealth.

The forums will outline basic water resource challenges and opportunities, both locally and statewide. They also will help to raise awareness while gathering citizens' thoughts on water resource issues in Pennsylvania.

In addition to the public forums, DEP has created a web page with a wealth of related water information that will include a running summary of issues raised at the forums, links to upcoming events, videos and publications, news clips from around the state on water and a message board where people can discuss water issues online.

A new publication, "Water is Life," raises provocative questions about water in a collection of essays by a variety of authors and will be available at the forums and online.

"After the forums, DEP will publish a summary of public input on our website," Hess said. "This information will help DEP to better understand the issues that Pennsylvania faces as it works to protect and conserve its precious water resources."

Forums will begin at 6 p.m. with informative exhibits and displays, followed by presentations and open discussion. An information exchange table will be available for anyone who would like to display related water resource materials.

For more information on the forums, visit DEP through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.dep-.state.pa.us (directLINK "water forums").

Lady With White Linens Offers Glimpses Of Victorian Finery

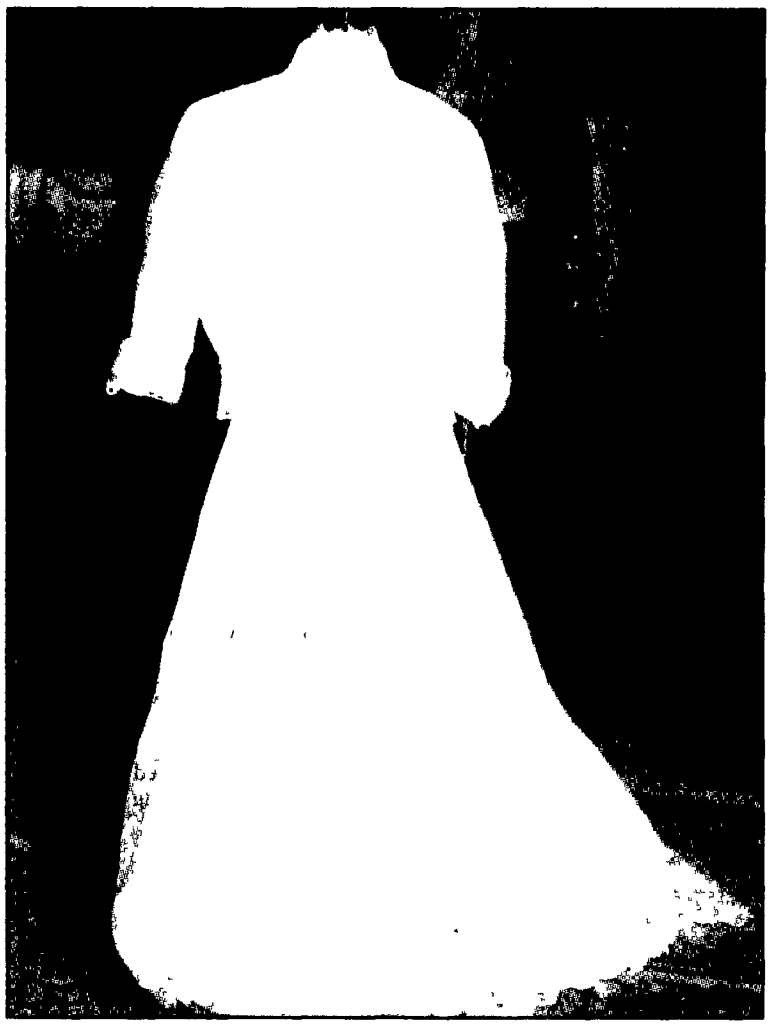
LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — As Doris Hetrich fingers the delicate organdy of a Victorian gown, her eyes light up. "This is real organdy made before World War II," she says with the excitement of finding a rare treasure.

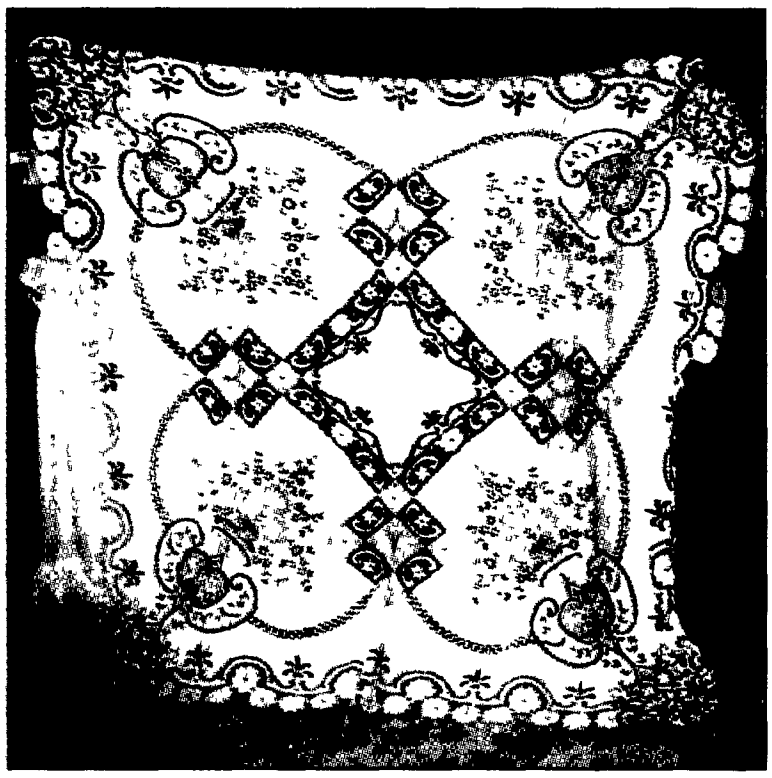
Seeing her treasure trove of fine linens, lace, and delicate cutwork enables a person to catch a glimpse of the glories of the Victorian age — the era when women's fashions touted the most exquisite details. Tiny pleats, delicate embroidery, crocheted lace, diminutive buttons, and patterned cutwork prevalent in the gowns and baptismal dresses reveal the pride accomplished seamstresses took in their work.

Pressing those pieces from the past are no easy task. Doris spends hours preparing pieces for display at one of the four shows in which she participates annually.

When Doris is finished, each piece is displayed in pristine condition, glistening white, and ironed to perfection. Because the fabric appears so white and perfect, it's hard to believe these pieces are old. Customers from around the world say no one else has as beautiful linens and gowns as the "Lady with the white linens," as Doris has become known.



This batiste wedding dress comes in two pieces. Most of the dresses from the Victorian era featured extremely small waistlines because women's waists were pulled tight with corsets and sometimes ribs were broken to make their waists appear even smaller. Today, seamstresses can enlarge heirloom gowns by inserting antique lace beneath the armpits to the waist.



This 39-inch square tablecloth hand pieced in Portugal sells for $85.

Doris is so well known for her outstanding collection that famous people often seek her out when they have pieces to sell or buy. Some of her linens and homespun sheets appeared in the movie, "The Witness," starring Harrison Ford.

Despite these brushes with fame, Doris remains unimpressed. "I love the pieces for what they are — not for who used them," she said.

She wants her customers to treasure the pieces as much as she does. "I'd rather they wouldn't buy if they won't take care of it," she said of the pieces.

She is especially thrilled when a bride-to-be chooses one of the Victorian gowns to wear for her wedding.

Although the gowns are exquisite in detail, they also carry an aura of simplicity and purity.

Some pieces come from Europe, some from Austria, and some from America.

Linen and old fabrics are often yellowed with age. Through years of experimenting, Doris has become an expert in restoration.

"Never wash by machine," she emphasizes. "The problem is that too many people are too much in a hurry today," she said of many fine pieces that have been ruined.

Doris washes everything by hand. Some pieces are soaked in Ivory soap or Biz for three days. Doris frequently changes the water to keep it hot enough. This method almost always removes stains. As a last resort on a few pieces, Doris has used a tablespoon of bleach on a particularly stubborn stain.

Fabric is always ironed on the wrong side after it is starched with liquid not spray.

She layers four thicknesses of blankets on the ironing board when pressing embroidery and cutwork. This enables the embroidery to stand out from the linen and causes it to "bounce."

Her patience for pressing the time-consuming vintage pieces—some as many as six hours—amazes even Doris. "When I was a child, I hated ironing," she said.

But today, the ironing process invigorates her. "I feel reborn," she said of seeing a piece brought to life through this final process.

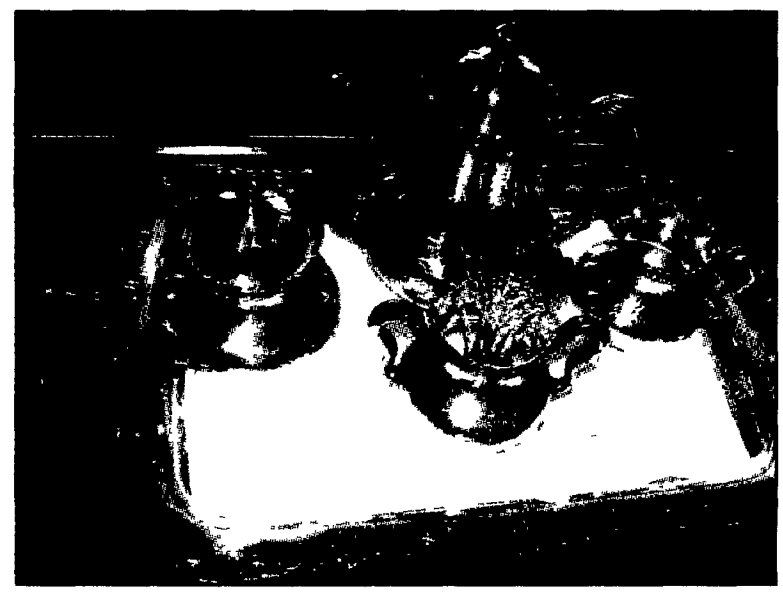
Her display booth always attracts crowds. In addition to gowns, she has selections of napkins and linens for banquet tables measuring from 90 to 144 inches in length.

In buying and selling, Doris makes fairness a priority. "I don't use people," she said of connections. "The Christian way is the only way to do business."

The 74-year-old finds time to enjoy her home filled with collections of antique dolls, dishes, and profuse flower beds. She admits with a laugh that husbands and linens don't mix, but is grateful her husband helps with the props and seven-hour setup of her booth.

The next show for "the lady with the white linens" is scheduled for the 50th Reading Antiques Show, Riveredge, July 20-21.

Doris Hetrich tries on a battenberg lace collar that comes with matching cuffs. The detachable set enabled women to switch the set from dress to coat.



Beneath the silver tea set is a linen bed tray cover featuring open cutwork.

This handmade Victorian blouse with fine detailing sells for $95.

Kaleidoscopes: Optic Artistry

A couple of twists and colorful prisms of glass create ever new designs.

What began in 1816 as a scientific instrument is today recognized as a serious, collectible art form. When mid-19th century kaleidoscopes make a rare auction appearance, listed as optic devices, the prices can begin at a modest $650 and go into several thousand dollars.

Sir David Brewster was a scientific genius who created a telescope when he was only 10-years-old. As an adult, he was a multi-faceted scientist who researched diverse subjects. Of greatest interest to him was the effect of different angles of light on glass. His theory on the polarization of light involved a simply way to calculate the angle at which light must strike a substance for maximum polarization. Scientifically known today as Brewster's Angle, it has been used in the development of lasers, fiber optics, etc.

The optic instrument Brewster invented in 1816 and named the kaleidoscope had become a popular form of entertainment in the Victorian age, with many improvements. Credit American Charles Bush with the invention of the "Parlor Kaleidoscope" with a color wheel that changed the background for the images. Collector and author Cozy Baker is known as the "First Lady of Kaleidoscopes." Her first book on the subject, was written in 1985, and at the same time, she curated the first major exhibition of scopes in Washington, D.C. Her collection of more than 800 kaleidoscopes includes antique and contemporary examples. As founder of the Brewster Society, she has converted her home into a house-museum, that begins outside her door with a contemporary kaleidoscope mailbox. Her new book, "Kaleidoscopes-Wonders of Wonder" not only documents the past history of kaleidoscopes but introduces current artists and their works in dazzling colors.

"With more colors than a rainbow and patterns as numerous as the stars, kaleidoscopes are being fashioned into every conceivable shape and form, from simplistic to stupendous, Baker says. They can range from simple cardboard tubes with metallic mirrors containing plastic bits and pieces to elegant tubes of sterling silver and 14 karat gold set with rubies and emeralds.

"It is astounding that one basic concept involving a simple set of mirrors, with an eyepiece at one end and an object cell at the other, can produce such a limitless variety of creative ingenuity," Baker points out.

Clues: The popularity of the kaleidoscope almost came to an end when other forms of entertainment such as radio and television were invented. They were mainly found in the five and dime stores and sold as toys. In 1946, the Steven Manufacturing Company (still in business) began making hundreds of different types of kaleidoscopes, along with other toys. These still turn up at flea markets and estate sales, where they are scooped up by collectors for a few dollars.

For adults interested in the kaleidoscope as art, the revival of interest came in the 1970s. Glass Blower Bill O'Connor, a noted glass blower was given a Bush Kaleidoscope to repair. He became so fascinated that he experimented with mineral compounds in his glass-blowing furnaces that resulted in blazing colors. He went on to create series I and II in an edition of 50. If one came to market these days, the price would be in the thousands of dollars.

The kaleidoscope revival was on its way when in 1982 Smithsonian Magazine printed an article on kaleidoscopes.

Reproductions of the Bush scope and contemporary artists can be found in crafts and gift shops and museum gift stores.

Most of the antiques trade publications list shows. There are also Price Guides available in local book stores.

Questions And Answers

the bottom "Forbes Silver Co., quadruple Ctr USA.#216. The head of an eagle is in the middle of the engraving.

Can you tell me age and value?

J.N., Marathon, FL

A The Forbes Silver Company is one of the original companies that formed the International Silver Co. Forbes was founded in 1894 in Meriden, CT.

They primarily made silver-plated holloware. To get top dollar a silver plated piece must be in good condition. Yours would have a shop value of $40 in good condition.

Any idea of what this carved, one piece wood, man's head on a post is and could be worth?

C.D., N. Miami Beach, FL

Your 19th century, primitive, wood carved figure is an interesting example of folk art, probably American. Similar pieces have sold at auction for $600 and up.

My father bought this Oriental style vase with a lid in England in 1940. What is unusual is there is a padlock attached to a metal ring round the vase. It is dark blue with pastel color butterflies and flowers. It has no marks. What do you think the origin and value are?

J.A.K.L., Davie, FL

Because it has no marks and is Oriental in appearance, I would say it is Chinese Export, early 19th century, made for the Indian market.

The padlock indicates it was made to hold something of value. At the time tea and tobacco were luxury items. Because it is so unusual I suggest you contact Becky MacGuire, Chinese export specialist, Christie's, 20 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020

I'd love to find out if my mom's chinaware is really antique. The dinner plates show people in 18th century dress in the center. On the back it says "The Harker Pottery Co., quality made in U.S.A. since 1840.

Hand decorated. Warranted 22K.Gold. Old English."

L.M., Miami Lakes, FL

While the pottery was established in 1840 your pieces were made in the 1940s. Prices for your plates are $25 each.

I have had the three ceramic water fowl for 20 years. They are marked "Japan". Any idea of age and value?

J.M., Clover, SC

Your waterfowl figurines were probably made in the 1920s.

Their shop value could be around $125 each.

I would like to know the value of a lorgnette(opera glasses) sterling marked Tiffany, in their original Tiffany cloth cover.

M.W.H. - Morganton, NC

They could sell at auction for $1,500 or more.

What could I sell my antique bible, published in 1904, Hertel, Jenkins Co.? It is leather bound and has gold leaf on the cover and page edges.

J.S., Norwood NC

While the contents all bibles are of great value, unfortunately, unless the bible is several hundred years old and with wonderful wood cut engraved illustrations the monetary value is low. A dealer would probably offer you $25.

This cabinet with the cut glass mirror is one of several pieces my wife, inherited from her German/Polish industrial family in Berlin. The elaborate hardware could be brass. Dove tails are handmade and the pieces are veneered. What is the age and value of the cabinet?

C.K., Waxhaw, NC

A clue to age would be the hardware. Make a tiny knife scratch. If it shows gold, it could be ormolu(gilt bronze) and 18th century. If silver, 19th century...if the hardware is original.

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — John Mattilio has joined his father-in-law Kenneth H. Greider, in his farm real estate sales business, as a real estate sales professional.

This Lancaster-based real estate sales business will be working with farm and commercial real estate customers in southeastern, central, and southcentral Pennsylvania.

"Our combined knowledge and experience makes the firm ideally suited to serve the needs of farm real estate buyers and sellers," said Mattilio, who worked for 14 years as an agricultural lender in Maryland and Pennsylvania.

John Mattilio

Greider has been a realtor for 26 years and a broker since 1985.

Mattilio is a native of Armstrong County and a 1987 Penn State graduate with a degree in dairy science and agricultural education.

Land Pride Introduces Core Aerators

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride Core Aerators, CA25 Series, help reduce compaction in heavy soil conditions. Available in 4-foot, 5-foot and 6-foot units, these aerators feature case hardened ¾-inch spoons to penetrate the ground to a depth of 4½-inches, depending on soil conditions and additional weight needed.

A core is pulled every seven-inches of forward travel from each of the spoon gangs. Each gang is mounted independently, which minimizes torque on the spoons during slight turns.

Storage stands are located on all four corners for added stability and ease of hook up to the tractor. Water tanks are optional on five-foot and six-foot models to safely and easily add weight to aid in spoon penetration.

A.I. Firm Honors Achievers

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — Fourteen members of the Select Sires staff from across the U.S. have been named "Super Achievers."

This national Select Sires achievement award is given to employees who annually increase market penetration in their assigned sales areas and expand the services that they offer to their existing customers.

The managers of the 10 Select Sires member cooperatives choose both the sales representatives and technicians from their organizations who will be recognized at the national level.

Those selected for achievement vary from a tenured, direct-herd sales representative who already has sold more than two million units of semen in his A.I. career, to a direct-herd sales representative who increased sales in his service area by nearly 20 percent during his first year of employment. Some winners manage small sales areas with high cow concentrations, while others travel across several counties each week to service their accounts. In all sales situations, the Super Achievers have shown untiring energy, product knowledge and, most importantly, a devotion to helping their customers succeed.

The Select Sires Super Achiever Sales Representatives, listed in member cooperative order are All West/Select Sires — Marvin Correia, Tulare, Calif.; Cache Valley/Select Sires — Jay Nansel, Billings, Mont.; COBA/Select Sires, Inc. — Kevin Hinds, Newcomerstown, Ohio; East Central/Select Sires — Glen Stewart, Lomira, Wis.; Minnesota/Select Sires Co-op Inc. — Steve Dockendorf, Cold Spring, Minn.; NorthStar Cooperative — Jim Armstrong, Stanton, Mich.; Prairie State/Select Sires — Tom Johnson, Lynn Center, Ill.; and David Ripp, Little Rock, Iowa; Select Sire Power Inc. — Gene DeWitt, Belleview, Fla.; and Southeast Select Sires Inc. — Chris Riedel, Hays, Kan.

Select Sires Super Achiever Technicians are COBA/Select Sires Inc. — Scott Braden, Beach City, Ohio; East Central/Select Sires — Howard Minnema, Fond du Lac, Wis.; Minnesota/Select Sires Co-op Inc. — Bryan Wolf, Sauk Centre, Minn.; NorthStar Cooperative — Pete Lauscher, Marathon, Wis.; and Prairie State/Select Sires — Monty Kuhm, West Union, Iowa, and Joe Demmer, Peosta, Iowa.

Fecon's Rainbow Mulch System Processes Wood Waste Into Colored Mulch

CINCINNATI, Ohio — All the components of Fecon's Rainbow Mulch® Coloring Systems, which economically process ground wood waste into profitable, premium landscape mulch, are described in detail in a new four-color flyer.

Utilizing either the Rainbow Mulch Batch Mixer or Continuous Mixer, Fecon can adapt all elements of its coloring systems to meet any company's specific requirements. The coloring systems are ideal for landscape wholesalers, pallet recyclers, compost facilities, lumber mills, wood waste processors or any company considering colored mulch as a profit center.

The Rainbow Mulch Continuous Mixer, the toughest, most versatile and highest capacity mixer in the industry, processes more than 200 cubic yards an hour through it 12 cubic yard hopper.

Whether operated mobile or stationary, the Continuous Mixer processes and colors mulch through 29 forward and 14 reversing mixing paddles, completely mixing it with maximum exposure to 21 individually adjusted spray nozzles.

Wireless remote control, the new "Extra Dry" system for minimizing water use, and attached stacking conveyors in three different models ranging in size from 40' x 30" to 50' x 36" are available as options with the Continuous Mixer. Other options include a second pigment pump, auxiliary hydraulics for a separate stacker, electric power, drum scale, a hydraulic feed water pump, and a gooseneck or pintle hitch highway trailer.

Operating Fecon's Batch Mixer BM1000 or BM1600 is a simple one-person operation: simply fill the six or 12 cubic yard hopper and push a button. The Batch Mixer automatically adds the correct amount of pigment and water, mixes, empties and prepares itself for the next batch. Every cycle is initiated by wireless remote control or manually at the control panel.

Optional Batch Mixer features include wireless remote control, auxiliary hydraulics, PTO or electric power, secondary pigment pump, drum scales, three-auger discharge, and a gooseneck or pintle hitch highway trailer.

Fecon also supplies a complete line of long lasting, environmentally safe Rainbow Mulch Colorant in a wide range colors, from gold to red or dark brown to grass green, and free samples are available on request.

New Bobcat® 883 Boosts Lifting Power Without Size Increase

WEST FARGO, N.D. — Bobcat Company, a business unit of Ingersoll-Rand Company and the leading designer and manufacturer of compact equipment, announced the new Bobcat® 883 G-Series skid-steer loader, which provides more lifting power than the Bobcat 873 model without an increase in overall machine size.

The Bobcat 883 features 2,750 pounds rated operating capacity (ROC), making it ideal for landscaping applications that require carrying and lifting heavy loads such as pallets of sod, or brick and block. It complements the Bobcat skid-steer loader lineup by giving users another size option between its 873 and 963 models.

Standard features include auxiliary hydraulics, a preventative shutdown system, an adjustable suspension seat, and Power Bob-Tach, which allows quick changing of more than 50 different Bobcat attachments. Performance-enhancing options also are available, including two-speed travel (speeds up to 12.5 mph), a counterweight package (boosting ROC to 2,900 pounds), and high-flow auxiliary hydraulics to run attachments such as planers.

G-Series cab enhancements make 883 as comfortable as it is powerful. G-Series cab innovations include a new rear-pivot seat bar that provides more armrest support and additional room for larger operators; an optional contoured cab door that increases visibility and maximizes cab space; a larger cab opening for easy entry and exit; and an optional high-efficiency heating and air conditioning system with four rotating directional-flow vents that direct heat and cool air where it's needed most.

New Bobcat Skid-Steer Loader.

The optional Bobcat Deluxe Instrument Panel features a keyless start security system, several monitoring and diagnostic capabilities, system shutdown protection and help menus that provide user support in multiple languages.

EMI Releases Disc Mower Safety Manual

CHICAGO, Ill. — A new safety manual for operators of agricultural disc mowers has been released by the Equipment Manufacturers Institute (EMI). The 44-page booklet communicates important safety information to owners, operators, service personnel and others who may be involved with the operation and maintenance of agricultural disc mowers including disc mower conditioners and self-propelled windrowers. The key objective of the manual is to help users develop good safety habits and to make them better agricultural disc mower operators.

The safety manual is intended to point out some of the basic safety situations that may be encountered during the normal operation and maintenance of an agricultural disc mower and to suggest possible ways of dealing with these conditions. The manual is not a substitute for the manufacturer's operators manual(s). Some of the topics covered in the manual include: being a responsible operator, safety management of hazards, following a safety program, safety before operating, safety during operation, safety during shutdown and safety during maintenance.

Information in the manual was developed through a combined industry effort of disc mower manufacturers — specifically members of EMI's Industrial/Agricultural Mower Manufacturers Council. The safety manual augments specific safety information and instructions that manufacturers provide with their products. The convenient 5½-inch by 8½-inch (140 by 216 mm) size make the manual easy to use on the job. In addition, it can be used as a supplemental safety aid in the educational activities of employers, vocational schools, trade unions, trade organizations, insurance companies and government agencies.

To order copies of EMI's Agricultural Disc Mower Safety Manual, contact Hubbard Publishing, Inc., P.O. Box 525, Windsor, WI 53598; (608) 846-9293; e-mail: hubbardpublishing@home.com. EMI now has a total of 16 safety manuals for operators and mechanics which can be purchased electronically from EMI's Website (http://www.emi.org/secure/product_safety_materials/product_safety_order_form.htm).

Variable Chamber Balers Let You Make The Call.

If you demand a smaller hay package and a baler that's easy to operate, the New Idea® 4643 (4'x3') and 4644 (4'x4') are for you Thanks to the variable bale size, you can customize bales to fit your operation And each model creates bales that range from 30 to over 50 inches in diameter.

With so much diversity, you'll only bale the size you need Their low-profile, full-width pick-up glides easily over fields, catching every stem. The pickup height can be easily adjusted

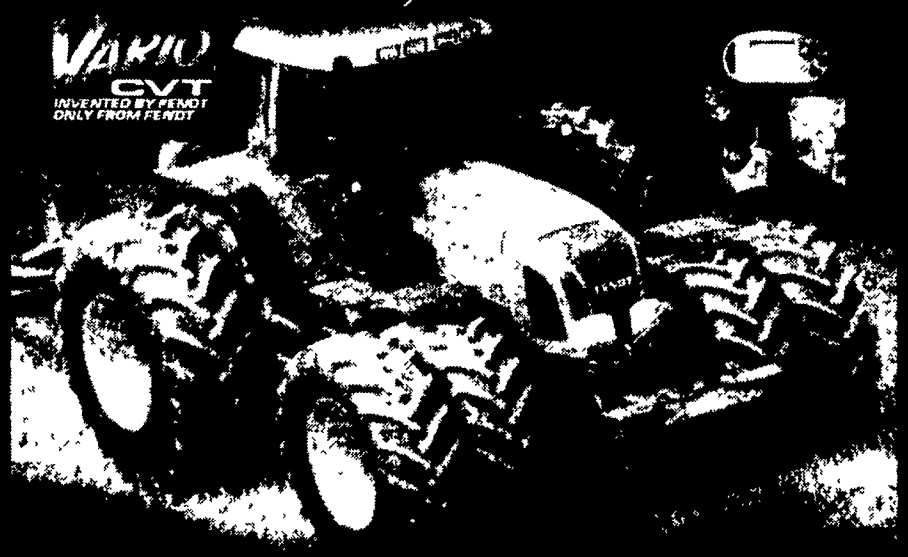
..., THE NEW STEPLESS DRIVE TECHNOLOGY, IS ONLY AVAILABLE IN THE INGENUITY OF A FENDT.



An innovation' change has occurred in the engineering of tractor design. It will change the way you work.

Cutting-edge engineering has blended the efficiency of powershift and versatility of hydrostatic technology.

... an infinite selection of speeds with no shifting. Engine potential is maximized, giving you the exact working speed you require and not just something "close enough". Productivity rises noticeably. Fuel consumption drops.

All driving functions plus hydraulics are now controlled through a joystick linked to the on-board computer. All the power and control is in a slight movement of your wrist. Power that ranges from 72 to 240 PTO horsepower.

... combine to make this tractor your secret weapon for a much more profitable and comfortable working day.

... But it will have to be a FENDT. No other tractor in North America offers this amazing technology.

FENDT REVERSE STATION TRACTORS

When you invest in a FENDT Tractor with Reverse Station, you're actually getting several pieces of equipment. In less than a minute you can turn this ingenious tractor into a self-propelled forage harvester, swather, windrower, chopper, even a powerful snowthrower. Seat, steering wheel and the entire instrumentation swings 180 and locks in place. And from this position, you've never had a better view of your work.

Waterbeds for Cows

ALANTA® LifePoly Patent Pending

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

Here's What Some of Your Neighbors Say About Alanta Waterbeds:

Dale Hindman, Brockway, PA
"We have seen a big savings in the amount of bedding we use and I believe the durability of the beds will be excellent over time."

Harlan Hoover, Oley, PA
"I am pleased with waterbeds. Cow comfort is excellent."

BEEF TIPS

Pa Farm Show 2001

Simmental Grand Champion Female at the 2001 Pa Farm Show, Shoemaker's Proud Mary, bred by Maple Cove Breeders, Bedford County, Pa., was purchased by a junior association member, Raymond Stough, of York County, for $2500 at the Pa Beef Expo. Later the heifer was sold at a profit by the young man to Messick Farms in Dauphin County, who showed her in the Farm Show and will now include her in their herd. Youngsters wishing to buy a purebred Simmental heifer, bull or steer to show, can call for a FREE state directory listing all Simmental breeders in your state.

Attention: Swine and Poultry Producers Announcing.
Crude Soy Oil Now Available
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:
- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:
- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:
- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program
- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40.
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

Market Manager: 'My Neighbors Are My Customers'

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEFFSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — "Directing traffic" has multiple meanings at the Erb family's "Brooklawn Farm" roadside stand.

Now in the midst of planting season, owner Jim Erb is planting sweet corn, field corn, Indian, popcorn, and ornamental corn in the warming earth.

In addition, "we still farm 100 acres of field corn and soybeans," said Erb, who is joined by his wife Romaine, daughter Diana, a horticulture student at Penn State, and son Jeffrey.

"We're serving the immediate community. We don't do a lot of advertising. We see our customers over and over again during the season, and see them season after season. We view what we're doing as being their gardeners. It feels like, in a sense, we're an extension of the community. My customers are my neighbors.

"The essence of what we're doing here is our own homegrown produce. That's still the key," he said. Strawberries, varieties of corn, sugar, snap, and hull peas, peaches, plums, nectarines, pears, and apples are some of the homegrown produce that Brooklawn customers enjoy.

A Seasonal Business

In April, bedding plants and mulch products open the season, which closes with Christmas trees the end of the year. During the offseason, the Erbs and employees service and maintain their equipment, take a vacation, houseclean, and attend conferences and trade shows.

"I love to go to meetings and get ideas. I have more ideas than what I can get done," he said. One of these

Full Summer Sun Critical As Growers Prepare For Raspberry Season

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Raspberries are flowering on the vines as summer weather shows up early in Lancaster County orchards. Raspberries, either summer-bearing or ever-bearing, do well when planted on an open site with at least 6-8 hours of sunlight, according to Ohio State University Extension Fact Sheet HYG-1421-98, "Raspberries For the Backyard Fruit Planting." Page 12 includes recommended raspberries and cultural characteristics, including a chart for training systems and plant spacing, from the university. Learn more about bramble plants by checking the Website for the North American Bramble Growers Association, www.hort.cornell.edu/grower/nabga/ or the contacting the association at 13006 Mason Road NE, Cumberland, MD 21502, (301) 724-4085.

This scene shows early May growth of raspberries at Shenk's Berry Farm near Lititz, which also features pick-your-own strawberries in season. Owners John and Linda Shenk maintain about two acres of three different varieties of raspberries. They have mostly black raspberries, pictured here, including Bristol and Jewel. They also have some red raspberries, including Lauren. Many were planted about six years ago. The raspberries can be picked beginning in early July. Photo by Andy Andrews, editor ideas includes looking at better ways to manage weeds, either by pesticide use or mechanized weeders or a combination of the two.

One exciting development, he said, was the addition of 25-50 trees of peaches which will come during apple season in October. This new variety is one of 50 varieties of peaches grown at the farm.

"We have had success with September peaches and are looking to launch out into possibly October. We planted them last year and will know a few years down the road."

Another long-range idea is a possible greenhouse expansion.

"I see technology changing in the greenhouse industry. We handle over 100 varieties of just herbs. I feel like, after all these years, I've just scratched the surface," he said.

A better flower display and a facelift for the entire outer wall of the stand is also on Erb's "to- do" list. The early sweet corn enters the scene on June 21, followed by other varieties which will fill the market until the end of October.

The fall crop includes pumpkins, gourds, Indian and popcorn. "In the fall, the whole season is different," said Erb.

Among the produce varieties, as with many stands, sweet corn is king. Although peaches are also an important crop, corn leads in terms of dollar value and sheer acreage, said Erb.

A Business Of Variety

"We have a network of employees who help do different things," he said, estimating that the business employs 25-30 seasonal workers. "We have high school and college-age students along with retirees who work a variety of schedules to fill niches."

The variety of employees also means a variety of interests. "We have some employees who love to come to the farm and get dirty, and others that love to interact with the customers," he said.

Erb enjoys production over administrative responsibilities. He uses words such as "exciting," "invigorating" and "challenging" when he speaks about his job.

"The challenge is with all the variety we deal with — such as energy costs, weather, new varieties of plants, new technology — to have a consistent, quality produce. That's what keeps me interested."

A focus on harvesting the fruit when it is at the peak of ripeness is a hallmark of the stand, and what makes the fruit so popular with the customers.

"I'm growing a product that's here today and had better be eaten by tomorrow at the latest," said Erb. "We're trying to give the community the next best thing to having a peach tree in the back yard."

Erb's parents, Ruth and Roy Erb, began farming in 1938. The next year they sold produce off the back of a truck or with a sign out on the road, inviting customers back on the farm. By 1954, a roadside stand was built at the location of Brooklawn Farm's present stand.

Truly a roadside stand: one of the stand's seasonal employees, Dora McAlpin, Millersville, operates the cash register.

Apple Crop Outlook, Marketing Conference Aug. 16-17

MCLEAN, Va. — The U.S. Apple Association (USApple) announced that its 2001 Apple Crop Outlook and Marketing Conference will be Aug. 16-17 at Chicago's Fairmont Hotel.

USApple's annual conference combines market outlooks and networking, and is the premiere gathering of the apple industry in the U.S., and perhaps the world. More than 350 industry leaders from the U.S. and around the world, representing all segments of the apple industry — production, processing, sales and marketing — attended the 2000 conference.

"USApple's meeting provides significant value year after year," said USApple President and CEO Kraig R. Naasz. "The latest U.S. and world apple market intelligence combined with unparalleled networking opportunities make this meeting a one-stop source for apple industry information."

The 2001 conference will again feature current, first-hand information needed to compete in today's global apple marketplace. Outlooks for the U.S., European, Chinese, Canadian and Mexican crops will be detailed. Other sessions will focus on apple processing demand, apple juice concentrate issues, regional crop discussions and more.

As in the past two years, the conference will again include the association's annual business meeting, and presentation of the industry's two top awards: the American Fruit Grower magazine's Apple Grower of the Year and The Packer/The Grower publications' Apple Person of the Year.

USApple will distribute registration information to members and past conference attendees this spring. Other interested persons can contact USApple at (703) 442-8850 for more information.

Pruning, Tree Health Discussed At Twilight Meeting

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEFFSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — A fruit growers' meeting late last week drew more than 70 area producers and experts to both review and exchange ideas about the produce industry.

Jim Erb, owner and operator of produce market Brooklawn Farms, hosted the event. Dr. Rob Crasswell, Penn State pomologist, began the evening with a review of peach tree training.

Experienced horticulturalist Ben Rogers, who prunes Brooklawn trees each year, aided Crasswell in the presentation. The pair demonstrated pruning techniques on trees planted last year. Crasswell pointed out the significance of having an open-centered tree.

Dr. Jim Travis, Penn State fruit pathologist, said that by removing the suckers and ensuring that the tree is bare in the center aids tree health. "If the foliage is too thick, the inside of the tree defoliates. Pruning improves air circulation and light, so there's less area for cankor to get started," he said.

"To continue to force the branches outward, lightly clip the growing terminals to stunt the growth. That forces the lower branches out horizontally," said Crasswell. "That also keeps foliage there for canopy for photosynthesis needed for growth."

Thinning a tree takes advantage of the shoots on either side of the trunk.

The trees were given "minimal training" this year because of the trees' slow growth, said Rogers.

"There are two philosophies," said Crasswell. "One is to let the trees grow, and the other is to intervene and selectively chose branches to get the most growth. As Rogers and I said, there's not one right way."

However pruning too late, warned Crasswell, will put stress on the trees by taking away the young leaf surface, which decreases cell division and results in smaller fruit.

"Left go, they'll be a brush pile by fall," said Rogers.

Changing Branch Direction

Rogers demonstrated a technique traditionally used in apple trees. By scoring the stiff branches which tend to reach upward, "not hardly a quarter of the way through, one inch apart, you can put the limb on a much better angle," he said.

"It takes a little wood out to allow the branch to bend." Bracing the branch will keep it at the new position. June, said Rogers, it the optimal time to do the procedure, since Balsa cankor thrives only in cooler weather.

"The lower you start the scaffold branches, the more canopy you have," said Crasswell.

The number of branches is also important, according to Rogers, who pointed out that many of the orchard's peach trees had four "leaders" on each tree.

"That's the maximum," he said. "Three would be better."

Plum Pox Update

Tree health topics included the high-profile plum pox virus. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is again in charge of sampling both orchards already sampled and those not yet sampled for the virus.

"The plum pox virus was not found outside of the quarantine area. We've been really fortunate in this state. If it continues, we will have this virus contained," he said.

On the plum pox front, "no news is good news," he said. So far, 900 acres have been pulled, according to Travis, with more slated to be destroyed.

There is a moratorium on planting in the quarantine area, even for homeowners, but "if I was outside the quarantine block and I wanted peaches, I'd go ahead and plant them," he said, pointing out that Pennsylvania nurseries remain negative for the virus.

Other tree health topics, according to presenters, include the threat of the tomato ringspot virus. The virus lives on broadleaf weeds, which are fed on by nematodes, or worms.

The worm then picks up the virus, feeds on the peach tree root, and injects the virus into the root, causing the tree to die in three to four years.

The fire blight threat, said Travis, drops off after the orchard is finished with blooming. However with lingering blooming may come the chance for an infection. Bacteria is aided by temperatures greater than 70 degrees.

"Only three hours of wetness will wash the infection down into the bloom," said Travis. Also leaves tattered in violent summer storms may allow trees to become infected.

"Don't relax too much," he said. "Be alert. Keep your eye on the weather forecast and the growth of the plants."

Chemical Thinning Response Studies

Crasswell also gave a report on studies centering on chemical thinning. Reducing clusters of young fruit by spraying products such as Sevin or other chemicals saves on manual labor, making the technique commonplace in orchards.

Using a combination of several products yields the best results, according to Crasswell. Thinning the crops increases the size of the remaining fruit, promotes flowering the next year, and prevents biennial bearing.

The weather during the spring season, when the trees are thinned, has an effect on the tree's response to thinners. Also with the type of bloom, amount of bee activity, and grower management factors — such as the individual techniques of applying the thinner — all help determine a tree's response to thinners.

Heavy or short bloom, poor bee activity and excessive, cool, or wet weather all lead to increased response to thinners, according to Crasswell.

Always spray trees after flowering, he said, since the chemicals are toxic to bees. A homeowner, however, should bypass chemical thinning for hand-thinning the trees.

Greg Krawczyk, Penn State fruit entomologist, gave a insect pest update. He gave not only information about insects but also the type and time of spraying for the pests.

He recommended considering the choice and rate of an insecticide product, along with the method of application, water volume, and treating on an area-wide basis. Rotate insecticide chemistries between broods whenever possible, advised Krawczyk.

2001 Mid-Atlantic Convention Biggest And Best

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — More than 1,600 growers, industry suppliers, processors, extension agents, university staff, and speakers and other guests registered for the 2001 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in addition to 200 exhibitor representatives. That put the total attendance near the 2,000 mark.

The 2001 Convention enjoyed good weather, unlike last year when an unexpected snowstorm dumped eight or more inches of drifting snow over much of the eastern part of Pennsylvania on the first day. Moreover, the 2001 Convention planners had scheduled seven concurrent sessions on all three days of the meetings, making the program the most extensive yet.

New sessions on wine grapes, potatoes, and marketing were added to the usual schedule of education sessions.

Dr. Peter Ferretti from Penn State was the general vegetable program chair and Dr. Robert Crassweller, also from Penn State, coordinated the tree fruit program. Kathleen Demchak from Penn State planned the small fruit program and Mark Chen from the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension put together the wine grape program.

Kenneth Martin from Furman Foods coordinated the tomato sessions and Dr. William Lamont from Penn State University organized the three half-day sessions on potatoes.

The bedding plant and cut flower sessions were handled by Dr. Robert Berghage at Penn State University. John Berry from the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension set up the roadside marketing session.

The Department of Agriculture, the Pennsylvania Food Merchants Association, along with PVGA and the Vegetable Marketing and Research Program, sponsored a grower reception prior the annual Fruit and Vegetable Growers Dinner January 30. The evening's program featured awards and presentations by the participating groups after entertainment by the Biglerville High School Jazz Band.

The 2001 Mid-Atlantic Convention was the 24th year that the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, and the Maryland State Horticultural Society have met together in Hershey. This year the four organizations were joined by peach growers from around the country for the annual meeting of the National Peach Council. More than 120 exhibitors lined the aisles of the trade show in the Great American Hall at the Hershey Convention Center.

Growers who missed this year's convention can still order copies of the 2001 Proceedings for the vegetable portion of the program. Simply send a check for $12 to PVGA at RR 1, Box 947, Richfield, PA 17086.

ANOTHER DRY SUMMER

Is 2001 going to be another dry growing season? I've already talked with growers that are concerned about whether they will be able to get the plow into the soil to turn under their rye cover crops. As I write this column, we're also several inches below our normal rainfall for the year and the high temperatures in late April made the situation worse. So my advice to all growers of fruit and vegetables is to start preparing for another season of heavy use of your irrigation system!

By now you should have performed normal maintenance on your irrigation system. You should not wait until your newly set crop of watermelons needs to be watered to discover that your pump is broken and the necessary part will take two days to arrive. I hope you have not needed to lose a crop to learn this valuable lesson.

If there were any persistent problems with your irrigation system last season, hopefully you have solved those already as well. Frequent clogging of emitters or lines with a trickle system could indicate a water or filtration problem that will again re-occur this year if not corrected. Solving the problem now should help you achieve maximum results from your irrigation system. I suggest you consult an irrigation professional to help with any of these persistent problems.

Another reason to consult an irrigation professional is if you plan to make any major changes to your system or if you plan to irrigate additional acreage this season. If your system is not properly designed to provide the quantity of water needed for your crops, you could suffer from reduced yields and most likely reduced returns for that crop.

Can you afford to loose money like this? An irrigation specialist can help determine if your system can support the additional acreage or what modifications are necessary to increase the watering capacity to suit your needs.

Those new to using irrigation should collect as much information as possible from other growers, industry reps, and by reading available literature. This is especially true for those new to using trickle or drip irrigation. There are many potential problems with this type of irrigation system. However, a trickle system has enough advantages to you, the grower, in order for you to learn how to operate this type of system.

When Should I Irrigate

This is a common question among growers. I have also asked several successful growers how they determine when they need to water and received about as many different answers as growers that I asked!

You need to remember that all fruits and vegetables are more than 90 percent water at harvest and quality can suffer quickly when water stress occurs. When it comes to determining the need to water a crop, there is no true substitute for experience. But what does a new grower do successfully grow a crop while gaining the necessary experience?

I have several suggestions to offer. First, start by collecting information. Talk with other successful growers of the crop(s) you intend to grow and learn from their experiences. There is no need to make the same mistakes they have! Also consult an irrigation specialist, as they will often have information you can use. Finally read any available information of the subject, including production guides, irrigation guides, trade journals, newspaper articles, and even seed catalogs. Most of these sources will provide tips and suggestions on irrigation. Also be sure to know the critical times in the production cycle of your crop for water use. For most vegetable crops this starts at set and continues through harvest while with fruit crops it can vary with the time of the season.

Both new and experienced growers should consider using some method of monitoring soil moisture. One way to do this is to use tensiometers. I have talked with growers that have used tensiometers and I am using them myself in an irrigation study and we all agree that these devices also require some experience to use properly. However, I believe that it is worth the time to learn how to use some type of monitoring device, because what you think the current soil water status is and what the actual soil water status is can be very different. Seasoned growers can often do this based on their experiences with the crop and the weather conditions. However, a tensiometer could also help them confirm their instincts and set "numbers" to let their hired help judge when water is needed.

A new grower can use a tensiometer to warn him or her that the soil is getting dry and water is needed before there will be any obvious symptoms of stress in the crop. Several studies have shown that by the time you see actual symptoms of water stress in your crop (color change or slight wilting), yields have been reduced.

Tensiometers can be an accurate measurement of the need to water a crop and may help insure success with a new crop. By keeping records of their observations and actions, combined with a record of tensiometer readings, a new grower can begin to develop the knowledge necessary to manage the irrigation on their crops.

My experience has been that a dry season is more beneficial to fruit and vegetable growers than a wet season. By carefully managing irrigation, a grower can achieve both maximum yields and quality on their crops.

A wet season may eliminate the need to irrigate, but usually results in higher disease pressure. In addition, cloudy weather reduces the sugar content of your crop at harvest, and who wants to eat a bland melon or peach? So learn to manage your irrigation system to take advantage of a drought!

Lt. Gov. Donohue Awards $520,000 For Agricultural Development

GENEVA, N.Y. — Bacterial cultures don't often oscillate in front of New York State Lieutenant Governor Mary O. Donohue.

But biotechnology was front and center during her announcement of the recipients of $520,000 in funding from the Grow New York's Agricultural Research and Development Grant Program at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, in February.

Twenty agricultural projects throughout the state received funding. Commodities ranged from hay to beef, brandy to maple syrup, onions to apples, and potatoes to wine. The projects targeted economic development, feasibility analysis and project research aimed at addressing New York's agricultural development needs and opportunities.

In choosing a state-of-the-art lab at the Experiment Station in Geneva for the press conference, the Lieutenant Governor acknowledged the strong role Geneva has played in supporting New York's fruit and vegetable industry through the development of good farming, food storage and food processing practices.

"Agriculture is a vital component of the rural economy. In fact, every New Yorker benefits from a viable and profitable food and agriculture industry," said Donohue. "In order to maintain the industry's strong economic impact, we must encourage and assist the research and development of new concepts and products in the marketplace. I am extremely pleased to award these 20 grants to projects that will help strengthen New York's agricultural industry."

The Agricultural Research and Development Grant Program awards matching funds of up to $50,000 to individual farmers and various agricultural businesses, organizations, local governments and institutions. The funded, eligible projects focused on developing and expanding markets for New York agricultural products, improving production capacity, creating new technologies or improving efficiency in agriculture. It was the first year of the program. Another $500,000 is slated to be awarded in 2002.

Of the 20 projects, Cornell University-related projects received four grants, including $17,913 for the development of a NYS Beef Quality Assurance Program with Cornell Cooperative Extension (CCE) in Cortland County; $24,500 for an economic feasibility analysis of a producer meat processing consortium with CCE in Oneida County; $40,000 for a New York State "onions with attitude" branding program with CCE in Oswego County; and $21,300 for a project to maximize the potential of MCP, a post-harvest compound that helps control premature apple ripening, with Christopher Watkins on the Ithaca campus and Steve Hoying, of the Lake Ontario Fruit Team.

Promising to "put the crunch back" in the New York apple, Hoying said, "This gives us a wonderful opportunity to improve our market for the first-class apples produced in New York." MCP is a revolutionary new compound that improves apples' response to storage.

The wine and grape industry of New York garnered five of the 20 awards, including $50,000 to the New York Wine & Grape Foundation to create an awareness and appreciation for New York agriculture campaign in New York City. The $25,336 to a Seneca County alliance to promote production of Finger Lakes Pinot Noir also furthers the research of NYS Agricultural Experiment Station enologist Thomas Henick-Kling and viticulturist Robert Pool.

Vidalia Onion Growers In Georgia To Vote On Marketing Order

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently announced that Vidalia onion growers in Georgia will vote June 4-22 on whether to continue their federal marketing order.

The order requires holding a continuance referendum every six years. To be eligible to vote, growers must have produced Vidalia onions within the designated production area of Georgia during the period Jan. 1, 2000, through Dec. 31, 2000.

For the order to continue, at least two-thirds of the growers voting in the referendum, or growers representing at least two-thirds of the volume of these onions, must vote for the order.

Notice of the referendum was published in the April 30 Federal Register. USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, which oversees the marketing order, will mail ballots and voting instructions to all growers of record.

Eligible growers not receiving ballots may request them from William G. Pimental, USDA/AMS Southeast Marketing Field Office, P.O. Box 2276, Winter Haven FL 33883-2276, (863) 299-4770 or fax (863) 299-5169.

Pattison Receives Perrine Award For Pomology

GENEVA, N.Y. — Jeremy Pattison, a first-year graduate student in horticulture at Cornell University, received the 2001 Perrine Scholarship Award on March 9, in acknowledgement of his outstanding graduate work in pomology.

Hugh Price, chairman of the horticultural sciences department at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, presented the award to Pattison on behalf of the Perrine family.

The scholarship was established by David Perrine (Cornell 22) in 1993 to support pomology research at Geneva. The $2,000 award supports Pattison's doctorate research program and educational expenses. Pattison is the sixth recipient of the award.

Pattison has six years of practical experience in horticulture and graduated from East Stroudsburg University in 2000. Most recently he served as a vineyard manager and winemaker's assistant.

Since coming to Cornell to pursue his master's degree, he has worked under small fruit breeder Courtney Weber at Geneva. Pattison conducts research on Phytophthora root rot in red raspberries, a disease that limits production in New York State and all other regions of the world. Because raspberries are perennial crops, developing resistance to this disease is important because the plants remain in the same location for years.

"The main goal of my project is to design a molecular screening procedure that can weed out the copious number of susceptible genotypes to breed raspberry populations in an efficient and cost-effective manner, and hasten the development of resistant cultivars," said Pattison.

"Phytophthora root rot is the most damaging disease of the crop," said Weber. "Jeremy's research will help us pinpoint the underlying genetic component of resistance and allow us to breed cultivars in the future that will resist the disease. Awards like the Perrine award really help graduate students do good research, and it makes them realize that people appreciate the work they are doing. I think Jeremy's contribution to fruit research is just beginning and this award will help him to succeed in his efforts."

Processors Release 2001 Vegetable Intentions

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Processors in Pennsylvania intend to contract 7,200 acres of snap beans in 2001, 17 percent less than the 8,700 acres contracted in 2000, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Sweet corn processors intend to contract 1,480 acres, down 36 percent from the 2,300 contracted in 2000. Tomatoes will not be published to avoid disclosure.

United States' processors plan to contract 1.18 million acres of vegetables in 2001 for the nation's five major vegetable crops (snap beans, sweet corn, cucumbers for pickles, green peas, and tomatoes), down 14 percent from 2000. Acreage for freezing at 400,600 acres is down five percent, while acreage for canning, forecast at 781,390 acres is down 18 percent from 2000. In general, most states are seeing a decrease in contract intentions for canning due to high product inventories left over from last year.

U.S. snap bean processors intend to contract 192,200 acres, down 13 percent from last year. Contracted acres for freezing are at 64,400, up 12 percent from 2000. Contracted acreage for canning, at 127,800 acres, is down 22 percent from 2000. Sweet corn processors intend to contract 421,180 acres, down 11 percent from the previous year. Contracted acreage for freezing at 206,400 acres is two percent more than last year's total, but contacted acreage for canning, at 214,780 acres is 22 percent less than last year. Tomato processors plan to contract 263,800 acres in 2001, a decrease of 14 percent from last year. Contract production at 9.46 million tons is 12 percent below 2000.

U.S. pickle packers intend to contract 86,210 acres, seven percent above last year. Green pea processors intend to contract 218,600 acres, down 26 percent from last year. Contracted acreage for freezing, at 129,800 acres is 20 percent less than last year's total, and contracted acreage for canning at 88,000 acres is 33 percent less than last year.

Mertz Retires As PVGA Secretary-Treasurer

RICHFIELD (Juniata Co.) — After 30 years of service, Boyd Mertz of Northumberland retired as secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) and as a director when his terms of office expired at the annual meeting of the association on January 31. Mertz had also served two years as president of the association prior to becoming secretary-treasurer in 1971.

Two new directors, Lois Klinger of Catawissa and Keith Masser of Sacramento, were elected to their first three-year terms on the board of directors. The members also re-elected Elias Groff, Herbert Pollock, Robert Trax, and Dale Whitenight to three-year terms. Besides Mertz's term, the terms of Francis Janoski and George Richard expired. Thomas Styer of Muncy holds the designated berry grower seat. With the inclusion of potato growers into the association, the board decided it would be better to return to 18 directors rather than adding a 20th seat.

Members of the board of directors are elected by the general membership of the association at the annual meeting during the convention while the board of directors elects the officers.

Officers were elected to one-year terms. Barron Hetherington was elected to a second one-year term as president along with John Mason as first vice president and Hilary Schramm Jr. as second vice president. Rudolph Grob was elected secretary-treasurer to replace Boyd Mertz, whom he preceded in that office 30 years ago.

Barron Hetherington has a fresh-market vegetable and berry operation in Ringtown, Schuylkill County. He also farms several hundred acres of agronomic crops. Many of the vegetables are sold wholesale and the strawberries and some of the vegetables are retailed at the farm.

Hetherington is a Master Farmer and a second-generation PVGA director who has been on the board since 1987.

John Mason, along with his wife and two sons, operate a vegetable and berry farm in Lake City, Erie County. They have a modern retail farm market in nearby Erie City and also wholesale certain crops such as fresh market sweet corn and green beans and processing grapes. Mason has been a director since 1981 and previously served two years as president.

Hilary Schramm Jr., along with his brothers, operates Schramm's Farm and Orchards in Jeannette, Westmoreland County. The Schramms grow a wide variety of fruit, vegetable, and greenhouse crops which they retail at their farm market and several farmer's markets in the Pittsburgh metropolitan area. Schramm has served as a director since 1997.

Grob worked at Funk's Farm in Millersville for 48 years in both production and retail marketing of vegetables and berries. After retiring from Funk's, he worked at Schied's Produce in Millersville as a salesperson. He has been a director since about 1957.

Lois Klinger and her family operate a vegetable and bedding plant farm near Catawissa in Columbia County. They market much of their produce at several farmers' markets in the region.

Keith Masser and his family grow several hundred acres of potatoes near their home in Sacramento, Schuylkill County. Besides their own potatoes, they pack and ship potatoes from other growers on a year-round basis. Masser is also president of the Pennsylvania Cooperative Potato Growers.

Elias Groff and his son Steve grow vegetables and field crops using no-till methods on their Lancaster County farms in Holtwood. Their primary vegetable crops are tomatoes (fresh market and processing) and pumpkins.

Herbert Pollock operates a pick-your-own strawberry operation near Indiana, Indiana County. He is retired as a salesman/consultant for Agway in southwestern Pennsylvania. Pollock has served on the board since 1994.

Robert Trax has served as a director since 1989 and is also a member of the Vegetable Marketing and Research Board. The Trax family operates a large farm market, orchard, greenhouse, garden center, and vegetable business in Finleyville, Washington County.

Dale Whitenlight and his family operate a vegetable, berry, and grain farm near Danville, Northumberland County. They also grow bedding plants and maintain a retail farm market. Whitenight has served on the board since 1975 and as president from 1982 to 1983.

Standard For Frozen Celery

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The USDA is proposing a new grade standard for frozen celery and is inviting comments.

The proposal was initiated by a celery grower who petitioned USDA to establish a new standard. This new standard is intended to provide a common language for trade, a means of measuring value in the marketing of frozen celery, and guidance in the effective use of frozen celery.

This new standard could affect an average of 15 million pounds of celery produced yearly in the U.S.

The existing standard and proposal can be viewed at http://www.ams.usda.gov/fv/ppb.html.

Comments, postmarked no later than July 2, should be sent to Karen L. Kaufman, Processed Products Branch, Fruit and Vegetable Programs, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA Stop 0247, 1400 Independence Avenue S.W., Washington, D.C. 20250-0247. Guide Looks At Facilities For Roadside Markets

ITHACA, N.Y. — Selling produce from a roadside market can be satisfying and profitable, but only with careful planning.

A valuable planning tool for persons considering a roadside market, or looking to improve or expand a current one, is "Facilities For Roadside Markets," NRAES-52 (published April 1998), a publication from the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service. It features plans for a roadside stand and a roadside market, along with 26 illustrations and four tables.

This 32-page publication addresses the factors that affect whether a market will succeed or fail. The first step, choosing a site, is discussed with respect to zoning and building ordinances, visibility and accessibility, utilities, and appropriate drainage.

"Facilities For Roadside Markets," NRAES-52, reviews the necessary features of the sales area. It should allow for smooth customer traffic and space should be used such that items for sale can be prepared, stocked, and stored efficiently. Other aspects of the market which can influence customers to come or to return include adequate parking, good lighting, fire protection, and an accessible building.

"Facilities For Roadside Markets," NRAES-52, was written by Arthur W. Selders, extension agricultural engineer and professor at West Virginia University; Ransom Blakely, marketing consultant in Dryden, New York; Grant Wells, extension specialist at Iowa State University Extension; Robert Martin, consultant and former extension agent at the University of Massachusetts; Lynne H. Irwin, associate professor at Cornell University; and University of New Hampshire faculty Otho S. Wells, extension specialist, and Francis E. Gilman, former extension agricultural engineer.

NRAES-52 is available for $8 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, New York, 14853-5701. The shipping and handling charge is $3.75 for orders totaling $20 or less within the continental U.S. If an order totals more than $20, or if ordering from outside the U.S., contact NRAES for quantity discounts and shipping rates.

For more information or a free publication catalog, contact NRAES at (607) 255-7654, by fax at (607) 254-8770, or by e-mail at nraes@cornell. Or visit the Website, www.nraes.org.

Computer Tool Provides New Methods Of Plant Disease Control

WOOSTER, Ohio — A computer model linking simulation techniques with a geographic information system (GIS) is providing vegetable farmers with new strategies for controlling a serious plant disease carried by insects.

The epidemiological model, developed by Ohio State University researchers, combines GIS technology with a mathematical representation of insect and plant populations, to map out the movements of aster leafhoppers among lettuce fields. Such a tool enables the researchers to track the spread of aster yellows, a disease carried by the aster leafhopper, that can cause severe economic losses to such crops as lettuce, carrots, and celery.

Casey Hoy, an Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center entomologist and the project leader, said that since the aster leafhopper is responsible for spreading aster yellows from plant to plant, it's important to understand the movement of the insect as a means for controlling the spread of the disease.

"With the model, we can predict where the leafhoppers will go, how many wind up in each field, and whether they are healthy or infected with the disease. Such information allows us to recommend to farmers better timing on when to spray their fields," said Hoy, adding that farmers will frequently spray whether the disease is present or not. "This model also is allowing researchers and farmers to evaluate alternative control methods to using insecticide."

The researchers studied population movements of the insect in lettuce fields near OARDC's Muck Crops Branch in Celeryville, Ohio, by capturing thousands of them, marking them with fluorescent paint, releasing them at a single point, and then recapturing them 24 hours later. Using the pattern of leafhopper movement and such variables as field shape and spatial patterns, time and location of insecticide applications, the number of immigrating leafhoppers, and wind direction, the researchers were able to predict aster yellows epidemics for an entire growing season.

"One thing we found was that keeping fields separated from each other by 60 meters cut down a lot on leafhopper dispersal rates from field to field," said Hoy. The study predicted a 22 percent reduction in aster yellows incidence when such a distance separated the fields.

The study also pointed to the crucial timing involved in the harvest. "The percentage of the crop showing symptoms at harvest depends on how long it takes for the leafhoppers to get in and infect the crop," said Hoy. "If farmers plant a crop that will mature faster or that will express symptoms more slowly, we predict a significant decrease in the disease and in the need to spray for the leafhoppers."

Hoy said aster yellows has the potential to wipe out 100 percent of a lettuce crop. The disease causes the crop to turn yellow, making it unmarketable, and eventually die.

Other OSU researchers involved in the project include OARDC Associate Director L.R. "Skip" Nault and OARDC Plant Pathologist Sally Miller. Funding for the project was supported by grants from the U.S. Department of Agriculture Cooperative State Research, Education and Extensive Service (CSREES) North Central Region Integrated Pest Management Grants Program, the USDA CSREES National Research Initiative Assessing Pest Control Strategies Program, and the Ohio Small Fruit and Vegetable Research Foundation.

Gala Dinner Raises More Than $20,000 For New Lab

GENEVA, N.Y. — Fermentation science is the focus of Cornell University's new Vinification and Brewing Technology Lab that opened one year ago here at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station.

But it was the art of fine wine, beer, and food that was the focus of the Fourth Annual Gala Dinner and Wine Auction held at Casa Larga Winery, in Fairport, N.Y., on behalf of the new facility, on March 9.

Harris Wilcox and his son, Craig, auctioned 48 items on behalf of the V&B Lab, ranging from cases and magnums of wine, to dinners and weekend stays. The black tie affair raised over $20,000 for the lab. Of that, $5,000 was pledged by Anheuser Busch, $1,000 from King Ferry Winery, and $1,000 from The International Food Network. The National Bank of Geneva and Waterloo Container sponsored the dinner.

Researchers, winemakers, brewers, and industry representatives who will use the facility attended the dinner as well as community leaders, politicians, and wine connoisseurs. Susan A. Henry, dean of Cornell's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, was the master of ceremonies.

The lab represents a university/industry partnership on the part of Cornell and the Experiment Station. When the project was launched in 1997, the Station sought $250,000 to $500,000 in start-up funds, and hoped to establish a $1 million endowment for staff and programming. So far, more than $266,000 has been earmarked for the project from the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets. More than $97,000 has been donated by industry and local wine trails, including $10,000 from the Seneca Wine Trail.

In addition, industry has donated more than $145,000 worth of equipment, including presses and stainless steel tanks. At last year's dinner, the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Wine and Food established a $26,538 endowment for scholarships for industry representatives to attend workshops.

The 2,000 square foot laboratory was specially designed for enology and brewing studies. The former machine shop in the Food Science and Technology building at the Experiment Station has been completely renovated. Flooring, drainage, steam lines and ventilation were installed, and an outside delivery and grape crushing area were added. A research/teaching scale brewhouse will be dedicated to brewing technology.

The other end of the laboratory holds wine fermentation tanks and an analytical laboratory and office. The central workspace includes de-stemmers, crushers, presses, filters, bottle fillers, and heating and cooling equipment for wine making and brewing.

The lab builds on the Station's well-established programs in enology and fermentation science. Previously, the 10,000 square foot Fruit and Vegetable Processing Pilot Plant at the Station was used for fermentation studies, but New York's burgeoning wine and brewing industries required a separate facility to properly serve their needs.

Since 1976, more than 150 farm wineries have been established in New York State.

The lab is the premier site in the East for collaborative research and development in the art and science of wine making and brewing. The facility is used by faculty and staff at Geneva, as well as wineries, breweries, suppliers, equipment manufacturers, educators, consumers, national associations, and students.
